Cost Rise Sharpest In Decade

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A sharp increase in food prices, especially for imported fresh vegetables, pushed the consumer price index up last month for the biggest November-to-December gain in a decade, Statistics Canada reported today.

The over-all index for December was 136.3, compared with 135.4 in November and 129.8 in December, 1970. The food index accounts for 27 per cent of the over-all index, and it rose to 135.5 from 133.0 in November and 125.6 in December, 1970.

In percentage terms, the over-all index in December was five per cent higher than it was in December, 1970. A year's gain of two per cent is generally regarded as reasonable price stability, and anything more than that is excessive.

Food prices alone were up 7.9 per cent for the year. A large part of this reflects recovery from the unusually low prices which prevailed in the fall of 1970 as the result of a supermarket price war.

FOOD HIGHER

The largest increases were in foods, mainly in fresh vegetables and beef, and in health and personal care items. In the latter category, the big increase in the index was in the price of men's haircuts.

A government spokesman said that despite the rise in prices towards the year-end, the price index performance over the whole of 1971 was moderate. The average of 1971 prices rose 2.9 per cent above the average of 1970 prices, the lowest such increase since 1965.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the announcement showed inflation "is far from dead" and rising prices are "an injustice the Canadian people won't tolerate — even if the Trudeau government will."

FIXED INCOMES

Stanfield said Parliament could remove some of the injustice done to people on fixed incomes by removing the two-per-cent limit by which federal pensions can go up each year to compensate for rising prices. He said Parliament should not have been allowed to recess to Feb. 16.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said the increase is "not something to worry about" and the threat of inflation is "not serious at this time."

600 Desert Airport Towers

OTTAWA (CP) — Union officials called in vain today for an immediate return to work by close to 600 control tower technicians who are staging 24-hour study sessions at most major airports across the country.

A spokesman for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers said the study sessions amounted to illegal strikes.

Union officials tried late Wednesday to head off the first of the study sessions by 40 technicians at Montreal International and nearby St. Hubert airports which began at 1 a.m. EST today.

Picket lines were later reported to have been set up at Toronto International Airport. In Ottawa, the technicians reported to the airport but were not readily available for work.

The technicians service radar, navigational and communications equipment and the walkouts have had little if any effect on airport operations. Problems with equipment, however, could result in delays at peak hours.

In Vancouver, a spokesman for the union said it was discouraging any illegal work stoppages and that members would not walk out.

In Victoria, airport manager John Knowland said this morning there was no walkout by three technicians. Flights were operating normally.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Newfoundland Liberal government will resign next Monday or Tuesday, Premier Joseph Smallwood announced this afternoon. (See earlier story on Page 3.)

The premier's announcement ended more than two months of uncertainty and came after meetings with his cabinet and with the Liberal party caucus. His announcement followed a ruling by the Newfoundland Supreme Court Tuesday. The court turned down a Liberal party request to declare null and void an election in the ridings of St. Barbe South.

The St. Barbe seat was won by a Conservative in the Oct. 28 provincial election by eight votes. A judicial recount requested by the Liberals was halted after some ballots were found to be missing.

No-Fault Ruling Delayed

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

The B.C. Automobile Insurance Board reserved decision Wednesday on whether to order B.C. insurance companies to reduce no-fault insurance premiums.

Board chairman J. F. K. English gave no date for a decision following a hearing in an overflowing jury room at the Law Courts building in Victoria.

Eight of nine briefs presented to the hearing by insurance interests opposed the board's request for a reduction in the rate charged for no-fault accident benefits coverage from the current $20 to $22 level to a maximum of $14.

Only Bryan Rudkin of Westco Insurance Company backed the board, saying his firm had never charged more than $13 for the coverage.

ONE AGENCY

Rudkin also called for more B.C. control of the "Green Book" statistics on which insurance premiums are based. He also suggested greater efficiency could be obtained if the no-fault scheme were administered by a single agency, either private or government.

Such an agency would give the "lie-detect" to claims by insurance companies that a $14 rate would be inadequate for the coverage, Rudkin said.

'HOOTED'

Rudkin was hooted by many of the insurance executives in the room when he said he simply doesn't believe that many insurance companies actually gave $9 reductions in third-party liability rates when the $22 rate was established for no-fault coverage.

U.K. TROOPS, IRA IN STREET BATTLE

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British troops and Irish Republican Army gunmen exchanged machine-gun and rifle fire for two hours in the streets of Londonderry Wednesday, the bullets whizzing near half a dozen terrified children. It was one of the most sustained battles in more than two years of violence in Northern Ireland.

The IRA accused the British of firing on women and children.

British Army spokesmen said the soldiers hit three gunmen during the battle and another gunman in a skirmish at a nearby army post. They denied IRA claims that two soldiers were shot.

In Belfast, three gunmen drove up to a textile printing plant in the city's Roman Catholic Lower Falls area Wednesday night and two of them shot to death reserve policeman Raymond Denham, 43, an electrician at the plant, the army said.

Police said the killing appeared to be an IRA political assassination.

Denham's was the 210th death in Northern Ireland since violence between the Roman Catholic minority and the Protestant majority erupted in the province in August, 1969.

The Londonderry battle erupted when five men fired at an army helicopter sweeping low over the city's Catholic Bogside district in a search for IRA gunmen.

A BBC cameraman said men and women fell flat on the pavement as bullets whizzed overhead. He saw "six or seven children, mere infants, walking straight into the line of fire.

"The shooting was coming from three or four directions, he said. He and a colleague "ran up the road and threw them (the children) into a hedge."

"A woman came out and took them off us," he said. "One little boy was so terrified that his mouth was open but no noise would come out. Another was screaming."

An IRA statement said its men "only entered the scene after soldiers had fired at women and children. We recorded two hits (on British troops)."

Mrs. Mavis Sheerin, who said she had been accompanying five children home from school, told newsmen the soldier "sprayed the field with bullets. There were a considerable number of people scattered about the field, mostly on the way home from school. There was a lot of panic and two girls fainted."

Ghana Army Officers Stage Bloodless Coup

The coup members, led by Lt.-Col. I. K. Achampong, told Ghanaians in a countrywide broadcast that the constitution has been suspended, political parties banned and Parliament dissolved.

The airport was closed, but reopened a few hours later, while normal communication with the outside world was cut. The cable office and the Ghana News Agency were under armed guard.

The coup came while Prime Minister Kofi A. Busia was in Britain for a medical checkup. He was a host to Mrs. Richard M. Nixon last week during her tour of West Africa.

In London, Busia was said by a spokesman to be taking the news calmly. But the spokesman did not say what Busia's next move would be.

DISCONTENT WIDESPREAD

The overthrow of Busia's government followed widespread discontent over a 44-per-cent devaluation of the currency Dec. 27, skyrocketing inflation, mass unemployment and what the radio called "mismanagement" of government.

The radio, between broadcasts of martial music, said Ghana will be temporarily led by a "national redemption council" made up of army officers, traditional chiefs, representatives of the Trade Union Congress and members of Ghana's Christian and Moslem Council and the Ghana Assembly of Women.

The Trade Union Congress had been dissolved under Busia.

The army said the government will include civilian advisers.

There was no word that army garrisons in other parts of Ghana had joined the coup leaders in Accra and there was no mention of arrests but members of Parliament were urged to check in with army authorities "for their own safety."

The new government said it will review the devaluation and study a five-per-cent rural development levy on salaries and other controversial measures by the Busia government.

ARCTIC COLD GRIPS WEST

Furnaces worked overtime Wednesday as an Arctic cold front gripped Alberta, Saskatchewan and northern British Columbia.

The cold dropped in Tuesday night and temperatures plunged to record lows for Jan. 12 at Fort Chipewyan and Coronation in Alberta and Fort Nelson in northwestern B.C.

Fort Chipewyan reported 42 below, six degrees lower than the 36 recorded in 1966. Coronation shivered in 28 below, one degree colder than the previous record in 1966, and Fort Nelson equalled a 1953 low of 45 below.

The weather office said no relief is in sight for at least three days. The forecast for today was highs of 25 below in northern and central areas, and 15 below in the south.

NEWS BRIEFS

Stays on Rocks

ARCH-A-WAT, Wash. (AP) — Navy officials said today the stern of a transport ship around on the northern Washington coast will remain there until the weather improves sufficiently to get men on the vessel.

The decision was made after navy and civilian salvage experts said it would be impossible to tow or float the section out to deeper water.

Grass Conspiracy

TORONTO (CP) — A Canada Customs officer and four other persons have been charged with conspiracy to import 70 pounds of marijuana, valued at $30,000 into Canada from Jamaica, police said today.

Plane Dead Found

PUCALLPA, Peru (Reuter) — All 91 bodies of the victims of a Christmas Eve jungle plane crash near this central Peruvian town have been recovered, the Peruvian air force said today. The 56 bodies included that of German-born ornithologist Marie Anna Koepcke, whose 17-year-old daughter Juliane was the crash's sole survivor.

Pakistan Retaliates

NEW DELHI (AP) — Pakistan severed diplomatic ties today with Poland, Bulgaria and Mongolia in retaliation for their recognition of the new Bangladesh government in Dacca, Radio Pakistan reported.

ENVY JAMES MARSH!

Nobody likes to be rejected.

So, while you can't really condone the action, is there a driver who doesn't secretly envy James O. Marsh, 33, of 3960 Saanich Road?

Marsh took his car into the Saanich station last Dec. 10, fully confident he'd get it through. The car had failed once before and Marsh had his repair receipts at the ready.

But attendant Donald Chaplin flunked it again.

Noisy muffler.

That was too much for Marsh.

He punched poor Donald right in the nose.

And he had to be restrained from doing it again.

Today, the wheels of justice rolled over Marsh. He was fined $50 by Judge William Ostler after pleading guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Jail Guards Shun Bilingual Flash

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 250 prison guards at the British Columbia Penitentiary said Wednesday they would support any guard who refuses to wear new bilingual shoulder flashes.

James Clink, president of the New Westminster local of the public service alliance, said the guards had "a full discussion" before voting to support any member who is subject to disciplinary action for refusing to wear the patches.

The solicitor-general's department has ordered all federal prison guards to wear the bilingual flashes by Friday.

The report said English-speaking guards at federal prisons across Canada viewed the bilingual flashes as a step in a plan by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer to make the penitentiary service primarily French-Canadian.

The report said the solicitor-general originally ordered the flashes to be worn by Dec. 15. When the order was largely disregarded, the government issued a deadline of Jan. 15, stating that the guards, as government employees, must follow government policy in the matter.

Clink declined to give a figure on how many men at the B.C. Penitentiary were refusing to wear the new patches, but added he was "certain some of the men will not wear them."

Oil Tanker Shipments Via Strait Inevitable, NDP Caucus Told

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

OLYMPIA — Despite continuing Canadian attempts to delay or prevent construction of an oil pipeline to Valdez, Alaska, Washington state legislators said Wednesday they consider oil tanker shipments through Juan de Fuca Strait to be inevitable.

This view was expressed by Harold Wolf, House majority whip, at a joint press conference in Olympia attended by British Columbia's New Democratic Party caucus.

Opposition Leader Dave Barret said he was shocked to learn the Atlantic-Richfield company has ordered three supertankers, each capable of carrying one million barrels of oil for delivery to its refinery at Cherry Point, just south of the U.S.-Canadian border.

Barrett had told reporters the Canadian government would prefer an oil pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley. He said the NDP would never change its oppositon to tanker shipments from Valdez to Cherry Point.

Wolf told Barrett he wondered how serious Canada was about promoting the Mackenzie route when it was clear to Washington residents the Cherry Point refinery will require delivery of oil by water.

"When you say the alternative is the pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley, all I can say is what are you, Canadians, doing?" Wolf said.

Bellingham area representative Donald Hansey said his constituents also are opposed to tanker shipments but had to face the reality of high unemployment and the need for the estimated 400 jobs the refinery will produce.

"Economics are such as to overcome opposition, so the best thing is to try to minimize the danger of an oil spill," Hansey said.

Wolf said the legislature is catching up to the problem of framing regulations for tanker movement through coastal waters and pilotage.

"The latest Canadian attempt to prevent tanker shipping of oil through B.C. coastal waters is being led by Esquimalt Saanich MP David Anderson. He is seeking a court injunction to prevent construction of the Alaska pipeline.

"I am appalled at the fact that Ottawa and the provincial government don't seem to be aware of these developments and haven't been involved in planning safety measures on a joint basis," Barrett said.

Both parties also discussed briefly the possible flooding of the Skagit Valley. Neither this nor the threat of an oil spill has raised as much discussion in Washington as it has in B.C.

The NDP group was asked whether opposition to the flooding would subside if the conditions for lease payments on the flooded area were improved. If the flooding takes place B.C. will receive about $35,000 per year in compensation.

Barrett said raising lease payments to $1 million per year would not change the NDP's opposition.

"The Skagit is a psychological high water point," Barrett said. "If both communities are successful in stopping it, it will be an example of federal politicians responding to regional pressures."

Pollution dangers and ecological issues are not prominent in Washington this year because of high unemployment estimated at about 10 per cent of the labor force. Legislators also face an election here in November and must shape a redistribution of electoral districts before it comes.

As a result, their minds are more on practical economic and political matters.

The NDP MLAs spent a full afternoon on discussion.

Both groups spent much time discussing each other's political systems, and some of the Americans were clearly surprised to discover their guests were socialists.

As the NDP group emerged from an in-camera session

DEVIL MADE HIM DO IT

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A young gunman who told a fellow passenger "I work for the devil and I'm going straight to hell and take everyone with me" commandeered a jetliner in a dramatic hijacking effort that ended with the crew making a mad scramble for freedom.

The hijacker had demanded $1 million and two parachutes and indicated he w anted to fly to South America where he planned to bail out into the jungle.

"We got a chance to run and we ran like hell," said Capt. Tom Hill, who along with six other crew members escaped from the Braniff 727 jetliner following nearly seven hours of captivity on a remote runway at the Dallas airport.

Air piracy charges were to be filed today against Billy Eugene Hurst, 22, of Mesquite, Tex., who was arrested without resistance about 30 minutes after the crew made their break for freedom.

Decision Soon on Site For College of Pacific

A site for a 300-student international "school for peace" to open near Victoria in 1973 will be decided within "a very few days."

Robert L. Houston, chairman of the Canadian section of a joint Canadian-U.S. United World Colleges committee said following a meeting Wednesday in Ottawa the sites have been narrowed down to three for a school which is expected to cost between $4 million and $8 million.

The school, to be called the School of the Pacific, is expected to draw top students in their last two years of high school from Canada, the U.S. and most Pacific-area nations.

The school's recently appointed headmaster, Jack Matthews, formerly head master of Ontario's Lakefield College, will arrive in Victoria Friday to study the sites, Bertram Butler, 513 Transit, chairman of the UWC site committee, said today.

Butler said he doesn't know which sites are being considered because he was unable to attend the meeting in Ottawa.

He had predicted that it would be established on the 162 acres owned by Shawnigan Lake School, but the national committee Wednesday rejected an offer by this private school in favor of "a seaside location in more rugged country."

There has been speculation that one of the prime sites is mile-long French Beach, near Point No Point, the last stretch of undeveloped coast between Sooke and Jordan River.

But Pat Sinnott, lawyer for the French estate, said he hadsn't been contacted by UWC since some representatives showed interest in the beach more than a year ago.

Houston said the site will be paid for by an anonymous person. This donation is the "biggest step forward" in the 12 years since the school was first conceived.

The school will complement a similar School of the Atlantic, at St. Donats in Wales, and a School of South-East Asia, soon to be started in Singapore.

Legislators Fight Credibility Gap

Times Staff

OLYMPIA — Washington state governor Dan Evans and many state legislators believe the public does not trust government as much as it should.

Government credibility is an issue in the United States as well as Canada, and the Washington legislators are meeting the problem with special legislation introduced this year.

House of Representatives majority floor leader Stewart Bledsoe said Wednesday legislation will be introduced to require full declaration of sources of campaign funds by all state legislators and declarations of financial interests.

The house Wednesday also voted to open all its standing committees to the public.

Bledsoe said opening the committees was a majority step because for the first time the public will know how their representatives voted during the early stages of a consideration of bill.

He also said legislation will be introduced to require the registration of all lobbyists. These will also be required to declare their expenses as well as who they spent their money on, Bledsoe said.

If, for example, the forest industry's lobby was attempting to influence legislation, it would be a matter of public record how much had been spent to get its views across.

Pathet Claims Base, Huge Troop Cut Set

Times News Services

VIETIANE — Communist forces claimed today they have taken over the American-run base at Long Cheng, killing a large number of government forces. Government sources denied the report but said they were preparing to evacuate the base.

A broadcast by the Communist Pathet Lao said "the Lao People Liberation Army Wednesday overran Long Cheng, the last stronghold of special forces and Thai mercenaries in the Plain of Jars area."

It said "the enemy forces were annihilated in large numbers and the rest fled in panic with the Liberation Army after them."

The base is financed and run by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency as a training station for Meo tribesmen.

In Washington, President Nixon personnally announced today he is withdrawing an additional 70,000 combat troops from Vietnam by May 1, a cut of more than one half which will leave a U.S. force of 69,000 there.

He also said he would announce a further troop withdrawal before the May 1 target date.

Viet Cong forces also hit more South Vietnamese outposts today on the third day of intensified ground action, and U.S. fighter-bombers exchanged missiles with anti-aircraft batteries inside North Vietnam for the first time this year.

Twenty-six more ground attacks were reported in South Vietnam for the 24 hours ending at 6 a.m. This brought the three-day total to 86, the most in more than three months.

In the air, two U.S. F-105 fighter escorts launched three missiles at a surface-to-air missile site and an adjoining anti-aircraft artillery battery after a SAM was fired at the American planes, the U.S. command said.

. . . COST RISE

Benson said the average price level for the 12 months of 1971 was only 2.9 per cent above the average level for 1970. That was the lowest increase since 1965, he added.

George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, noted that the December increase over November was seven-tenths of one per cent. Multiplying that by 12 months showed an annual rate of increase of 8.4 per cent, he said.

LEWIS 'ANGRY'

David Lewis, NDP leader, said his reaction was one of anger that the government did not do something to stop it. But he would not call it galloping inflation, or say that Parliament should be called back into session.

The 7.9-per-cent increase in food prices last year is a combination of restaurant meal prices and the cost of food used at home. The statistics bureau found restaurant meal prices up 4.9 per cent in the 12 months to December, 1971, and the prices of food for use at home up 8.4 per cent.

The average urban family food basket, which cost $12.56 before Christmas in 1970, cost $13.55 last month.

with attorney-general's department staff, an official introduced Barrett to a television reporter by saying, "they're pinkos; we didn't know that when we asked them to come down here."

The remark, delivered in good humork was received with laughter. Barrett said later they had been discussing B.C.'s medicare and hospital insurance systems which are more advanced than those in the U.S.

Americans frequently refer to medicare as "socialized medicine."

Other subjects discussed Wednesday included rapid transit, tourism, government aid to private schools, pollution and drunk driving legislation.

Barrett said he is surprised and pleased with extensive welcome given his party. He said he intends to invite Washington legislators to B.C. in late March.

REGIONAL PROBLEMS

Today, the NDP group will attend the first meeting of the Washington legislature council, a joint Senate and House of Representatives body, on joint regional problems. House speaker Thomas Swayze said Wednesday the council wants to take advantage of the NDP visit by having the group help them frame terms of reference on mutual concerns.

Other activities today were to include an introduction to the Senate.

. . . NO-FAULT INSURANCE

filed rate schedules with the board to show the $9 offsets were put into effect.

But Rudkin said the offsets, if they occurred, hadn't prevented third-party rates from rising substantially in the past two years, while his firm's third-party rates had remained the same.

Some persons also took issue with Rudkin's claim that more control of green book statistics is needed to ensure that B.C. interests are protected.

UNRELIABLE

Rudkin also suggested insurance company rate-makers are happy to use green book figures to justify increases but tend to find the figures unreliable when they point to decreased premiums.

Most of the briefs presented agreed with the Insurance Bureau of Canada on the main objections to the insurance board's request for lower premiums.

There should be only one premium shown for third-party liability and accident benefits, they said. This would enable premiums to consider the inter-relations between no-fault and liability insurance.

The companies contended that green book statistics show a higher than expected cost for death and bodily injury claims under the third-party liability section of insurance which offsets the lower than expected claims under the no-fault section.

It is unreasonable for the board to request a reduction in the no-fault rate without considering the need for an increase in the third-party rate, they said.

Rudkin, however, said the "huge profits" made on the accidents benefits coverage make it obligatory for the insurance industry to accept the government's request.

The no-fault coverage pays benefits for death and injury and a number of other medical and funeral costs.

The Independent Insurance Conference told the board it subscribed to IBC arguments but admitted that it planned to set a $17 premium rate for the coverage this year, partly as a means of competing with other segments of the industry.

CONTROL FUNDS

William Hartley, New Democrat MLA for Yale-Lillooet and the only non-insurance industry spokesman to appear, said he couldn't understand why insurance companies should have such consistent operating losses but still want the government to keep its hands off their business.

He suggested insurance companies may be primarily interested in controlling huge investment funds rather than in providing insurance as such.

the weather

Inland areas of B.C. will be mainly clear and very cold today and Friday under the influence of an extensive Arctic high pressure ridge. The first in a series of weak Pacific systems offshore will begin over the inner south coast this evening. Most north coastal districts will be overcast with periods of snow today and Friday.

No Wonder Palermo Is Deep in the Hole

PALERMO, Sicily — Mayor Giacomo Marchello drove himself to work today. His car and 39 other city-owned passenger cars stayed locked up in the city garage because the road use taxes have not been paid. The city's buses continued to run, but only because police agreed to look the other way. The bus taxes have not been paid either, although the compulsory insurance has been paid. Palermo is 75 million lire ($127.5 million) in debt. The city council plans to approve money for the vehicle taxes, but even then it will take several days before the governmental red tape is unwound and the 40 cars may be used once more. Every alderman and city department head in Palermo is furnished with a city car and chauffeur.

MONTREAL — Any Canadians suffering from deflated egos can pump themselveh up a bit by glancing through the memorabilia of the late Georges Philias Vanier. The high regard in which Canada's second home-grown governor-general was held by eminent European and other figures is underlined by the forthcoming auction of some Vanier books and possessions. Inscriptions in books and various warm expressions of admiration indicate that Canada's reputation was enhanced by the six-foot lawyer-soldier-diplomat who even physically exuded a touch of Gallic grandeur, thanks partly to snowy-white hair and a twirly mustache. These tributes invariably include Mme. Vanier, who shared his trials as well as successes and has remained active since the governor-general died in 1967 after 7½ years Rideau Hall. Proceeds from the sale will go to the charities of Mme. Vanier.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Used car dealer Michael Lisman took the $1,000 bill, handed back $447.50 in change and watched the customer drive off in a convertible. Then Lisman noticed the bill had been issued by the United States of Anemia and signed by treasurer A. Phoneybill. The salesman took off in pursuit of the funny money man who, as it turned out, had purchased a bogus buggy. The car had broken down nearby. The customer, found in a tavern, returned the keys and $100 to Lisman, explaining the balance had been used to purchase a color television. Police said they turned the matter over to treasury agents.

FAIRFORD, England — Prince Philip took the controls of the Concorde supersonic air transport Wednesday, got it up to twice the speed of sound and said: "It was easy." Philip, who regularly pilots aircraft and helicopters of the Queen's special air squadron, took the controls for much of a 92-minute test flight. He touched Mach 2.02 about 1,350 miles an hour, before handing them back to test pilot Brian Trubshaw who landed the plane.

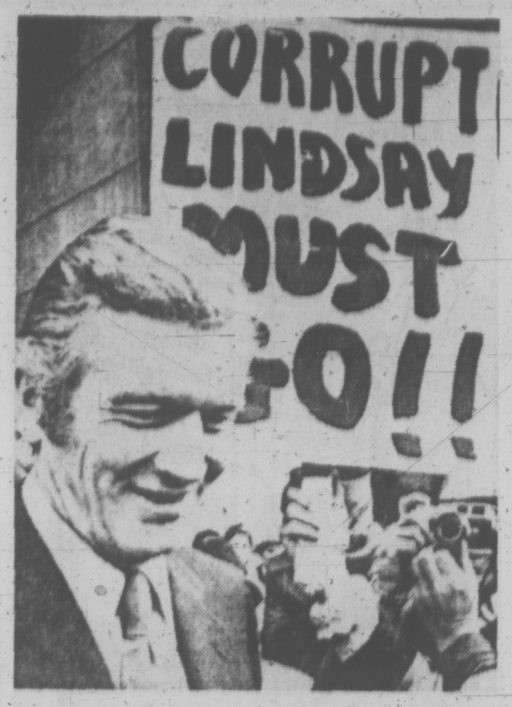
WASHINGTON — U.S. Surgeon-General Jesse L. Steinfeld told a group of women Wednesday that smoking could wrinkle their skin and ruin their smile. "Now, I can't really believe that women seriously want to endanger their health and grow old before their time," said the non-smoking Steinfeld. He announced "a major women's campaign" by the U.S. public health service "to do what we can to counteract the mindless barrage of ads luring women into the trap of cigarette smoking."

NAIROBI, Kenya — Jacob Mboya Arawo, oldest known citizen of Kenya's South Nyanza district near Lake Victoria, has died at the age of 147. Arawo left three wives, 134 grandsons and 103 granddaughters. He was given a mixed traditional Kenyan and Christian burial.



HEATING UP as primary time nears is the U.S. presidential election race. John Lindsay ignores a hostile picket as he heads for meeting in Boston where he announced he would run in the Massachusetts primary April 25.

Geoffroy Loses Case In Absentia

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal has rejected the appeal of Yves Geoffroy against his 1969 murder conviction on the grounds that Geoffroy missing from prison here since late last month failed to appear in court.

Geoffroy, 38, a former notary in Joliette, Que., was convicted of strangling his first wife and sentenced to life in prison.

After serving 14 months, he was given a three-day pass to marry outside the walls of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary Dec. 24.

Geoffroy married on Christmas Eve, then disappeared.

Chief Justice Lucien Tremblay said in an interview Thursday the appeal was rejected "simply on grounds that he failed to show up" for the scheduled appeal hearing Monday.

"When an appellant fails to show up at his hearing, we usually postpone his case if there's a good reason for his absence.

"But in this case, the appellant was not present because he escaped from lawful custody and we don't look too kindly on such a reason for absence from court."

The decision to reject the appeal was made unanimously by five justices, he said.

Loggers Need Road in Park —Williston

VANCOUVER (CP) — Resources Minister Ray Williston said Wednesday he plans to continue to press the federal government to allow a logging road to be cut through a national park on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Speaking at the annual convention of the Truck Loggers' Association, Mr. Williston said that if the federal government does not allow the logging road, valuable timber lands on the Island will be cut off from access to the sea.

The resources minister said he wants the road so that logs can be moved to the sea for movement by log barge.

Mr. Williston's department already has issued two licences to harvest timber on the land affected. He said the province has other areas of timber land which cannot be harvested because logging trucks are denied the use of the only access roads, which happen to run through national parkland.

'Far From Beaten' On Mobile Home Fee

But Ed Saunders, president of the Active Mobile Home Owners' Association, said Tuesday "we also feel we are far from beaten. We're going to continue to organize and grow, until we have sufficient numbers to give any political group cause for worry."

Saunders made the comment Wednesday evening following a meeting in Langford of the organization. No actions were taken at the meeting, however, because it was five people short of the required quorum of 50.

The provincial government established on May 1 a $3 to $8 monthly fee for residents of parks under the Mobile Home Park Fee Act. Fines range from $25 to $200 for park operators who fail to collect the fees.

Because operators have been balking at collecting, the cabinet last week made two amendments to the regulations. Operators will now get to keep 10 per-cent of the total monthly remittance if they remit fees by the 15th of each month, and if they file no returns they will be taxed as though every space in their park was occupied by a Grade A mobile home.

Fishermen Agree

Sooke fishermen are not opposed to relocating Victoria's fishing fleet, plus any overflow from Vancouver's fleet, in Sooke harbor. But first they must have wharfage for themselves, Wally Vowles, a spokesman for the fishermen, said today.

He was commenting on a transport department proposal to relocate commercial fishermen in Sooke.

Vowles said the Sooke government wharf accommodates only 13 commercial vessels.

He said berths for rent on adjacent wharves owned by Sooke fish buyer Larry Sutherland are also available, but a third of the private wharfage has been blown away and the remainder is in an advance state of deterioration.

The Sooke-Jordan River Ghamber of Commerce, he said, is preparing a brief for presentation to the federal transport department requesting additional wharfage to look after the needs of local fishermen.

U.K. Commissioner Plans Hectic Visit

British High Commissioner Sir Peter Hayman will attend the opening of the B.C. legislature, Premier Bennett's reception and state ball, and address two clubs during his stay in Victoria next week.

He will be in Victoria Monday, prior to the legislature opening, when he will be guest speaker at a Men's Canadian Club luncheon at the Empress Hotel at noon. He also will speak at the Women's Canadian Club at Newcombe Auditorium at 2:30 p.m.

He and Lady Hayman will be guests of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John Nicholson while in Victoria.

Educated at Oxford, the 57-year-old commissioner served in the Home Office and British Army prior to and during the Second World War, moving to the ministry of defence in 1943.

He was also information adviser to the governor of Malta, director-general of the information services in New York. He served as deputy undersecretary of state before taking his present appointment in 1970.

Joey's Decision Ends Muddle

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood is expected to tell Newfoundlanders late today if his Liberal government will resign in the face of a Progressive Conservative majority that was almost destroyed by a misunderstanding Wednesday night.

Mr. Smallwood planned to issue a public statement after a midday cabinet meeting and an afternoon gathering of the party caucus.

PC Leader Frank Moores and Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader, were reunited as political allies early today after Mr. Moores accused Mr. Burgess of selling out to the Liberals.

Mr. Moores said Wednesday night he had learned that Mr. Burgess would abandon his promised support of the Conservatives to run for the leadership of the Liberal party.

The Conservatives won 21 seats in the Oct. 28 provincial election, the Liberals 20 and Mr. Burgess was returned in Labrador West.

PROMISED SUPPORT

Thirteen days after the election Mr. Burgess said he would support the PCs while remaining a member of the New Labrador Party.

Mr. Moores made the accusation without making contact with Mr. Burgess, who was spending the night in Happy Valley, a southern Labrador community, while en route to St. John's where he is expected later today.

Gerry Korbal, a reporter with radio station VOCM here, reached Mr. Burgess by telephone and learned the NLP leader was trying to reach Mr. Moores to deny the allegations.

Mr. Korbai then telephoned Mr. Moores at his home in St. John's and arranged for him to receive Mr. Burgess' call.

After a lengthy conversation, both leaders announced there was no change in Mr. Burgess' position.

Mr. Moores' charge came after widespread speculation that Mr. Burgess would switch his support to the Liberals.

WILL DISCUSS REQUESTS

"My position has not changed one whit," Mr. Burgess said.

Mr. Moores said he would discuss with his caucus today requests by Mr. Burgess that a PC government pay special attention to Labrador, especially in the provision of roads and medical services.

Mr. Smallwood's decision to make a public statement arises from a Newfoundland Supreme Court ruling Tuesday that confirmed a PC candidate as the victor in St. Barbe South.

In the Gloom of Night

The postal service, like the weather, is something which most people believe they could improve, if given a free hand. The federal government, fortunately, has no control over the weather, but during the past few years it has been trying to improve the collection and delivery of mail. The results have been acceptable in some cases but open to energetic criticism in others. What has been particularly galling is the fact that both good and poor service have cost a great deal more to stamp purchasers, quite apart from additional demands on general tax revenue.

The one-cent increase in first class mail last July, and another one-cent raise at the beginning of this month, constitute a 33 1-3 per cent boost — bearable enough in small amounts but reflecting a substantial sum on a national scale.

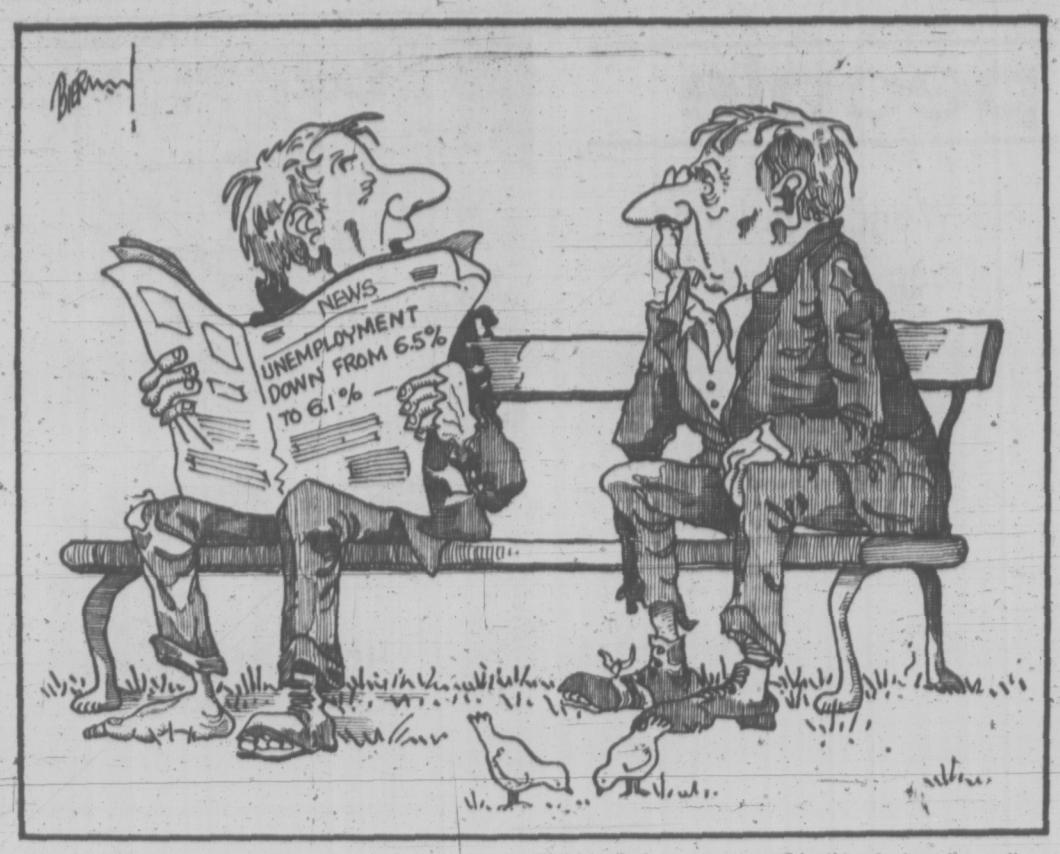
The problems of the Post Office, of course, are many. The jobs of mail carriers and sorters, once considered a low-training, low-pay category, have through union pressures escalated into much more highly remunerative positions. It is a trend of our era that people performing work requiring little special training or ability are requesting and receiving incomes more comparable with those in more demanding jobs. That is a natural enough human urge in a society measured in terms of material returns and possessions. But it throws the comparative costs of services out of whack without necessarily improving them.

To the large increase in its wage bill the Post Office has had to add the cost of rotating strikes which helped to gain the pay increases while making it harder to increase them. There has been, too, a large investment in expensive machinery and equipment designed to speed mail handling and relieve the dependence on costly hand labor. And finally, there are a great many more people in Canada today than there used to be, and more of them send and receive more letters and parcels than ever before.

It is essential, particularly in a country stretched across a continent as Canada is, that there be quick and cheap communication among its people. Anything that works against a free interchange of private messages is detrimental to the nation's unity. An efficient postal service, therefore, is vital to Canada, with its problems of cultural and racial exchange, more so than to many other countries.

The viability of first class mail should be maintained, even at the expense of some other classes. Not many householders would speak in favor of the so-called junk mail, the regular flow of unsolicited and largely unwanted advertising mail which adds to handling and delivery costs. A still heavier charge for this type of mail would help to reduce its volume and its burden on the postal service. Further cuts in delivery of first class mail would be detrimental to the basic purposes of the service. A future answer may lie in increased mechanization and in a greater standardization of mail as regards size, shape and weight.

It is easy — perhaps too easy — to demonstrate lapses in the mail service, sometimes very awkward ones. But there is also substantial evidence that the one-day service between various cities is working. Overnight from Winnipeg to Victoria isn't bad, really.



". . . it means that today we're a little less unemployed than we were this time last year . . ."

Faster, Farther, But How Much Higher?

From Mainz, Germany, comes the disquieting report that the costs of putting on the summer Olympic Games this year will be more than triple the original estimate. The chief factor in the rocketing escalation has been the rise in building expenses in Munich, according to the president of the organizing committee.

The news is important in view of Canada's plans to hold the 1976 event in Montreal. That city and the Quebec government will pick up some of the chits, but obviously a very large part of the costs will have to be defrayed by the Canadian taxpayer.

As the trend has been defined, there is little hope that costs will decline within the next four years unless some very drastic reassessment is made of the type of production Canada wants for the quadrennial athletic contests. With Expo, Montreal demonstrated imagination, flair and high competency in the handling of world events. Little criticism can be levelled at the success of that function — though it came high.

Now Canada is embarked on preliminary arrangements for its first Olympics and questions naturally arise over the desirability of making the Games a super-spectacular or a good, honest athletic meet properly staged but not necessarily an extravaganza.

Millions of Canadians will not be going to the Olympics at Montreal, but some of their tax money will be earmarked for the event. No one can justify a churlish parochialism about expenditure for an occasion of such national and international importance. Yet it seems reasonable to consider a return to a perhaps less extravagant form of what, in the original intent at least, was a meeting of the young men and women of the world in athletic competition for the glory of sport and better understanding among peoples.

MAURICE WESTERN

Problems in the Northland

OTTAWA — Ever since Confederation, it has been the custom for ministers, pestered by presumptuous critics in the House of Commons, to rise in their places and announce in sonorous tones: "Government policy will be announced in due course."

Times change and "due course" in recent months had acquired a new significance. We live by secret cabinet covenants secretly arrived at and subsequently released by officially unauthorized sources in such fashion as to ensure the maximum of publicity. While some critics disparage the new ways, the due leak calls for the same thoughtful government policy pronouncement.

Jean Chretien's guidelines for northern development, as approved on June 29 by the cabinet committee on priorities and planning, may not at first glance appear very surprising to attentive readers of Mr. Chretien's speeches. The minister has emphasized, and very properly, that development must serve the northern people. There is a problem, however, as was noted earlier with foreign affairs. Neat priorities are all very well but how do we escape the irritating question of the chicken and egg — which comes first, "people needs" or development? Neither can be neglected because they go together.

Startling Approach

What is, in a fashion, more startling is the government's approach to strategic developments in the field of non-renewable resources. "Where a venture is strategic to development in a region, or over a wider area, the government would participate in joint ventures, in management or in ownership, to ensure that matters affecting public interest (environment, people-needs) are taken fully into account . . ."

A respectable, non-ideological case can be made for this proposition. The developments in the Queen Elizabeth Islands were made possible by the Panarctic consortium in which the government holds a 45 per cent interest. Conditions in the North are not comparable to those in the South and a given national investment might be justified, among other reasons, for the probable effects in reducing transportation costs (the incubus of the Arctic) and thus opening a way to further developments.

It would appear, however, that our rulers in their meditations of mid-summer, suffered a curious memory lapse. In so large a government with so many policies, citizens will appreciate the difficulty of keeping track of everything. What was forgotten was Edgar Benson's Canada Development Corporation, which had been sold to Parliament as an answer to these vexing problems.

When Arthur Laing put Panarctic together, he did not have the benefit of the

EDGAR BENSON
. . . mentioned Panarctic

CDC. There was a government interest which could be harnessed to the interests of participant companies seeking a profitable investment. Mr. Benson mentioned Panarctic when he came, subsequently, to recommend the CDC to Parliament. Indeed he listed it among the companies, wholly or partially owned by government, which the cabinet was to be authorized to sell to the new development corporation.

The theory of the CDC, in case anyone has forgotten, was that there exists a broad area in which the national interest and the requirements of profitability coincide. What allegedly is lacking is investment capital which the CDC, once it gets out of its government swaddling clothes, will provide.

Why then does the CDC appear to be missing from the government's strategic plans for opening in the North?

It may be that the ministers, in speaking of government participation, have in mind the CDC. After all, the government, at the moment, owns that corporation and has named the directors. Mr. Benson may have been off somewhere on June 29 and this could explain any oversights in the actual wording.

But anyone, on a moment's reflection, will realize that this is quite impossible. In the first place, the CDC is supposed to flourish like the green bay tree and in such a fashion that the government will soon be down to a ten per cent ownership. Only a shallow critic would confuse government with ten per cent government.

CDC Independence

Secondly, there were those last spring who suspected, in the face of many assurances, that the CDC would be under government influence; in effect an extension of government. Mr. Benson's response to the doubters was no, no, a thousand times no. The CDC was to be completely independent of government and Parliament as it went about its good national works.

Whether the minister of finance was present or not, it is absurd to suppose that all these spirited responses were lost on his cabinet colleagues or could have been easily forgotten in the few short weeks between the founding of the CDC and the strategic decisions on development of the North.

Evidently, then, the CDC has been omitted with deliberation. Its promise is not for the North, at least not in the first phase. The government is to get in first as pioneer. Only the treasury has the financial muscle for high-cost early development.

Possibly, there will be a role for the CDC in phase two as, indeed, Mr. Benson anticipated earlier for the Panarctic venture. As government rarely does well in the sale of assets, the CDC ought by such a procedure to get in at bargain-basement prices. This may be of no particular advantage to the North but at least it would help to keep the CDC in the black. The idea is not new, as anyone may observe from other "profitable" ventures that live by subsidies from the general public.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

High Pay

I would like to add to the comments made by H. E. F. Makovski in your issue of Jan. 6, regarding the agreement to pay drivers of wholesale bread trucks $250 per week or $13,000 annually. He did not mention that the drivers in question belong to the Teamsters' Union.

Coinciding with the announcement of the agreement was a news item regarding the erstwhile president of the Teamsters' Union, Mr. Hoffa, who is on parole from a United States penitentiary. It appears that he has opted to draw his union pension benefits in one lump sum and will thereby be made a millionaire. So, every person in B.C. who eats bread, will be contributing to the comfortable living of an American hoodlum.

A good example of how a labor situation should be dealt with is the Sandringham hospital strike, where other workers were hired to do the job. However that would not have been possible with a big international union like the Teamsters, the hospital would have been wrecked. The employers are not free to employ whom they wish to, when the Teamsters are involved.

Nobody denies the right of people to strike. By the same token, other workers should not be denied the right to employ non-union men. The union should have the right to organize, as they now have, but they should not have the right to force joining, as they now do.

Why do the news media keep so quiet? When it's a question of doctors' salaries, there are big headlines. When truck drivers who are members of the Teamsters' Union get fantastic salaries for the job requirements, there is just a small item on the back page? Why? — The Choreman.

In His Image

There seems to be a lot of controversy about topless and bottomless dancing. Genesis, Chaper 1, Verse 27 says: "So God created man in his own image in the image of God created he him."

As God made man in his own image, it is presumptuous for us mortals to see wickedness or shame in his works.

A person who cannot look upon a nude human form, either male or female, without licentious thoughts or ideas needs a thorough mental spring cleaning, also a course in elementary psychology. — Thomas Durow, 2520 Bevan Avenue, Sidney.

Nakedness

I wish to commend the stand of Attorney-General Leslie B. Peterson against toplessness and nakedness in public places.

Also to register a protest against Jack Scott of the Victoria Times mocking this stand. Fools make a mock at sin.

We in gospel-hardened nations have lost out on Bible standards. We are ever turning to nakedness while those in foreign countries on hearing the gospel immediately cover their nakedness. Significant, is it not?

All that is necessary for evil to win is for goodness to do nothing. — Mrs. Sybil Blyth, 460 Chester St.

Calling Glebites

In early May, 1972 Glebe Collegiate Institute of Ottawa will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary. A committee of staff and students is working very hard to produce a variety of festivities for this occasion — a full stage production, specially written for the anniversary; a banquet for Glebites past and present, reunions and the like. But, we need help, and hence this letter.

Glebe graduates, ex-staff members (and anyone else) who can shed some light on the fifty years of Glebe (pictures, anecdotes, history) are encouraged to write to the undersigned relating their experiences. We would also like to know where Glebe graduates are living so that they may be contacted when plans are finalized for the anniversary celebrations and an indication of those interested in returning to help the present generation at Glebe celebrate. — Sincerely, J. T. Parry, Glebe 50, Glebe Collegiate Institute, 212 Carling Avenue, Ottawa.

College Costs

I am intrigued by the reported statements of Mr. Allan McKinnon, Victoria School Board Chairman, in your Jan. 4, edition, and I refer in particular to his remarks about the costs of Camosun College.

He is reported as saying that in the matter of costs to the School District the college, "doesn't hurt us all that much."

Later in the article he says, "the problem is that the government has not spelled out where its responsibilities lie in college affairs . . . Making the District pay the rent (for college buildings) is the way the provincial government divests itself of its responsibilities for higher education. They (the government) say they will pay the operating costs of the college, but we don't know what expenses

CAMOSUN COLLEGE

Question: How can Mr. McKinnon claim, "the college doesn't hurt us all that much" if he doesn't know (a) how much the college will cost and (b) how much assistance the government will give?

This kind of double talk reminds me of the original statement by the Victoria School Board when they claimed that the college would not cost the local taxpayer anything.

Mr. McKinnon should read the Public Schools Act, which in essence says that "the government will pay a grant of not less than 60 per cent of essential operating expenses . . . as approved by the Minister of Education."

Who decides what is essential? Why, the Minister or his minions. So much for your 60 per cent. The local taxpayers are entitled to a clear explanation. — Reader.

View Royal

One of the sources of social conflict involving the use of natural resources is the attainment of incompatible goals by different interest groups. For example, there is the Gorge, possessing unique recreational characteristics situated in a section where several thousand people live.

The interest group comprising the View Royal residents has as its common goals paying low sewage disposal rates and keeping out industrial, commercial and residential development. The means for achieving this end is not to instal sewers, which through no direct fault of these residents, has resulted in sewage contamination of the Gorge.

The social interest as viewed by residents of communities adjacent to the Gorge involves the use of the Gorge primarily as a recreational and aesthetic asset, safe for public swimming and not possessing that peculiar odor associated with an overflowing septic tank.

In a case such as this and by the rules of the game in a democratic society, the interest of the majority should dominate over the interest of the minority. That is, society in general will be better off if sewage contamination of the Gorge is not permitted.

The Greater Victoria Board of Health, reflecting the interest of the majority, has told the residents of View Royal in effect that the social cost being inflicted on all Gorge communities (in the form of reduced recreational value caused by sewage contamination) is not acceptable and must end.

According to accounts of a recent public meeting held at View Royal, it appeared that about fifty per cent of those in attendance recognized the existing situation as unsatisfactory. The logical course of action for the residents is to determine all courses of action open to them, and go from there. — B. Bryan.

Prescription

I should like to offer many congratulations to the University of Toronto Medical School. If I understand correctly they have announced their intention to use the results of a social attitude type psychological test as part of their applicant selection procedures.

This test (which includes such items as the applicant's views on government pollution control measures) should greatly improve the social calibre of our doctors. Hopefully it will also weed out any of those potential trouble makers who are now complicating the efforts of the provincial governments to place the medical profession under their socialist thumbs.

After all, of what use is a doctor who won't agree to enslavement?

Apparently the University of Toronto has decided that a doctor's views on the returnable pop container issue will help him transplant your lung. Congratulations! — G. W. Durward, 4032 Magdelin.

Strike Effects

A strike in our complex society is no longer against a firm, but is against society as a whole and consequently, is anti-social. Strikes keep the spiral of inflation going, which our federal and provincial governments are trying to curb, and should be superseded by a more civilized way of resolving disputes and, eventually we must set up labor courts to settle industrial disputes and avoid anti-social strikes.

In Canada, we have the privilege of electing federal and provincial governments, which are responsible for enacting and enforcing measures to promote the interests of the country as a whole. Both levels of government have taken steps to try and curb inflation and organized labor, but strikes, all across the country, completely frustrate these efforts so we have a right to ask which is the real government — the ones we elected or the small minority which prevents the elected governments from obtaining their desirable objectives.

All increases in prices brought about by strikes are passed on by all who can: manufacturer to wholesaler to retailer to the consumer, most of whom are unable to pass it on. The chief sufferers are the great group of people on fixed incomes, and particularly those living, or trying to live, on the old age pension. — Geo. F. Edwards, 843 W. 62nd Ave., Van. 14, B.C.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of Jan. 13, 1912:

BERLIN — An unprecedentedly heavy Socialist vote, which probably reached four million, and heavy Socialist gains proved, as expected, the feature of the 1912 elections to the Reichstag, held throughout the Empire yesterday. The election was marked also by the disastrous rout of the Radicals and far smaller inroads into the Clerical and Conservative majority of the last Reichstag than were anticipated.

Quebec Awakens to U.S. 'Invasion'

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

MONTREAL — While English-speaking Canadians have traditionally kept a suspicious eye trained on the U.S. border for signs of invasion by force, money or culture, the Quebecois generally sent smiles toward the southern frontier while scowling east and west.

But now the tocsin is sounding through the length and breadth of la belle province: les Yankees arrivent, les Yankees arrivent.

Lately, a number of Marxist writers have warned Quebec against baneful U.S. imperialism, of which Anglo-Canadian colonialism is but the middleman, writ small. Litterateur Leandre Bergeron, in his Petit Manuel d'Histoire du Quebec, divides Quebec's history into three periods of domination in which the present is the era of the Americans, successors to the French and the British.

But now a non-Marxist academic has provided a rationale for guarding against the United States and a paradoxical solution that had the holiday cocktail circuit buzzing in Quebec.

University of Montreal sociologist Guy Rocher is an establishment intellectual — if there ever was one. He was secretary of the Parent Commission that provided the blueprint for modernizing Quebec's education in the early Sixties. He is vice-president of the Canada Council and a former member of the Board of Broadcast governors.

* * *

Furthermore, unlike most influential French-Canadian sociologists, he studied for his graduate degree in the United States (at Harvard) rather than in France.

Rocher maintains that the greatest threat to French culture comes from the United States, not from English-speaking Canada. He proposes as a solution, not a Committee for an Independent French Canada, but rather the Americanization of the Francophone intelligentsia.

The common people of French Canada are already Americanized, he maintains, in their attitudes toward life. They read newspapers that carry more news of the United States than of Europe, they listen to the radio where they hear U.S. music, they see Hollywood films and read U.S. magazines.

"Listen to him (the French Canadian) speak of France and the Frenchmen; he discovers there (in France) that he is not a Frenchman from America but a French-speaking American," Mr. Rocher says.

The United States is the country where French Canadians feel most at home when they travel, finding there the style of life they have become used to. It is the only country they migrate to in any numbers.

In contrast, Mr. Rocher finds, the French-Canadian intelligentsia spurns U.S. influence and, as a result, has opened a gap which isolates it from the common people. "The intellectual class has assimilated almost nothing of American civilization, of its cultural and spiritual content. The very great majority of French-Canadian intellectuals know just about nothing of American literature, poetry, theatre and arts."

The result, he feels, is that the intelligentsia and the common people are travelling in different directions, with the common people being increasingly assimilated by U.S. culture, the intelligentsia absorbing the culture of France.

* * *

An original French-language culture in North America that is more than a poor French translation of U.S. culture cannot develop under such circumstances. Intellectuals must perform for a culture a screening, interpretive and critical function, and this is not happening in French Canada because of the intelligentsia's rejection of U.S. influences.

The first condition for a solution is that French-Canadian intellectuals must immerse themselves in U.S. culture to understand it from within. They will find among U.S. intellectuals a sophisticated assessment and critique of their own culture that will be useful to French Canadians in choosing selectively among the tide of influences from the United States.

Though English Canada is also beset with the problem of handling the U.S. cultural invasion, Mr. Rocher does not think that French Canadians have much to gain from an alliance in that direction against the common threat.

"Although both are preoccupied with defining themselves in an autonomous and unique way on the North America continent, the Francophone and Anglophone Canadian communities must do so each, for itself, independently of each other. They cannot count on each other."

In fact, he thinks that the two Candian communities can hinder rather than help each other in the common search for a solution. He gives two examples of the way the same problem is expressed differently in the two language groups. English-speaking Canadians have recently become concerned at the influx of foreign and especially U.S. academics in their universities. But they found no sympathy for their cause in the French-language universities, where U.S. academics were not a problem.

* * *

Similarly, Francophones feel they suffer a fatal threat from the fact that 90 per cent of immigrants in the Montreal area become Anglophones (chiefly as a result of the U.S. gravitational effect), with the consequence that Montreal, the heart of French-language culture in Canada, could become a majority English-speaking city shortly after the turn of the century.

But the Francophones' concern about averting eventual genocide evoked no sympathetic response either among the English-speaking population of Montreal or in the rest of Canada.

Rocher believes cultural self-determination is a necessity for a thriving, original French-language culture here and this means, he believes, a recast Confederation in which two nations, one English-speaking and one French-speaking, are given constitutional form. Failing this acceptance by English Canada — and he sees so far only a firm rejection — he believes the only acceptable alternative is complete independence.

Political independence in turn only has meaning if it is accompanied by economic independence, which can only be won if the population accepts a lower standard of living and massive intervention of the state in the economy.

Rocher's views appear in the current issue of the Revue de l' Association Canadienne d'Education de Langue Francaise, and extracts were published last week by Le Devoir.

Lin Piao, Mao and Chou En-lai in happier days (1967)

CHOU MAY BE NEXT VICTIM

By DEV MURARKA
London Observer

MOSCOW — The Russians now are sure that Lin Piao, once deputy and heir to Communist Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung, is dead. Medical experts, presumably Soviet and Mongolian, have reconstructed the charred remains of nine bullet-riddled bodies found in a Chinese aircraft which crashed in Soviet-dominated Mongolia last September.

They have established with reasonable certainty that two of the bodies were those of Lin Piao and his second wife, Yeh Chun, though there seem to be some misgivings that they could be doubles planted by Peking.

According to information reaching Moscow and accepted as genuine, the former Chinese president, Liu Shao-chi, ousted at the beginning of the Cultural Revolution, also died in Peking some time in early November.

Who is to fill the vacuum of power left by the deaths of these Chinese leaders and purges of their supporters? This question pre-occupies Soviet-China-watchers, especially because the temperature of Sino-Soviet relations has again plunged to new depths with the Indo-Pakistan war and China's apparent alignment with the U.S. in support of West Pakistan.

Current Soviet thinking predicts trouble for the resilient Chinese prime minister, Chou En-lai. It is strongly suggested here that Mao will inevitably turn on Chou when seeking a scapegoat for recent or future failures.

Among these failures will be counted the debacle of Chinese policies in south Asia, for which Chou has always assumed personal responsibility. Possibly, Chou will also be held responsible if President Nixon's much heralded visit to Peking next month does not produce results satisfactory to Mao.

Although Soviet analysts warn against taking foreign matters alone as the origin of the rifts in the Chinese leadership, they consider that foreign policy plays a much more important internal role in China than elsewhere.

They point out, for instance, the significant connection between the failure of the Chinese-backed Communist coup in Indonesia in September 1965, and the almost immediate launching of the Cultural Revolution in Peking. Two of the most notable and early victims of this revolution were the then mayor of Peking, and Liu Shao-chi, always closely associated with the Indonesian venture.

Similarly, in the case of Lin Piao and Mao, Soviet analysts consider two main foreign policy factors responsible for the ultimate break: the relative failure of Lin's long-term "armed struggle" theory in Vietnam which led to Hanoi slipping away and accepting a significant, if not overwhelming, Soviet presence and second the policy of cultivating Nixon, which was unacceptable to Lin.

Moscow is almost certain that Chou will be next for the chopper. Former leaders of the Red Guards resented not only the army's suppression of their movement when the Cultural Revolution was on its last legs, but also the firm control exercised by the state apparatus under Chou. When they strike or persuade Mao to strike a most critical phase will begin in China.

News Must Be More Than Commodity

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

It's bad form to say anything nice about your boss, even in private, but a couple of weeks ago mine did a very fine thing. Ben Bradlee, the Washington Post's executive editor, took the position that this newspaper wasn't going to allow the government to use nameless background briefings as a means of peddling a political line.

The purpose, as Bradlee said at the time, is not to block the government out of the paper, but to tell the readers who in the government is selling what.

Without names attached to statements, the government can zig, zag, abjure, recant and deny its own utterances and do it in such a way that it takes no risks and avoids criticism. Without names the reader is confronted with misty, oracular, deus ex machina pronunciamentos which he can't challenge or question, for their source is "official sources" and nothing more.

Thus, characters like Henry Kissinger can get us into a war or egg on the Pakistanis to butcher upwards of a million people in Bangladesh and never once compile a public record on which to be judged. He gets off scot-free and is in the marvelous position of only having to come forward and take credit for the touchdowns. There's no number on his jersey when he fumbles.

What Bradlee did for a whole newspaper, most journalists have to wrestle with in their working lives all the time. None of us have exactly the same rules of conduct because few of us do the same things and face the same kind of situations.

I, for instance, have never paid any attention to a high official when he says this is "off the record" or "background" or "deep background." Until Bradlee precipitated this latest storm, I wasn't even aware that there was a distinction between the three expressions and even now I'm not sure what it is.

I've always figured that a politician — and a high government official is just a politician with a job — should keep his mouth shut if he doesn't want to read what he said in the papers. Smart politicians know this. They only tell you their guff is off the record because they calculate you're more likely to print it if you think you've stolen it away.

* * *

As far as I'm concerned, it's always on the record with highly placed politicians, unless I say it's off the record, and that means literally saying it, not nodding in apparent agreement when they say it.

For me these are big, powerful men who are already too well protected without my cooperating in keeping their names out of the paper. With non-big, non-powerful, small, weak people, it's a different story. They must be protected against retaliation; they have no way of defending themselves. So for them you go off the record, you hide their names, but not for Sen. Weltbang, state counselor Kissinger or press minister Ziegler.

I can take that lordly position with my journalistic responsibilities. I haven't been invited to a background briefing in years. There's scarcely a high or even a medium high government official in Washington who would give me the time of day, much less a briefing. For my job I don't need it, but if I were working a regular beat, say at the Pentagon or the state department, I would be hard pressed to be so cavalier and ethical.

If your job is to get the news from the department of defense every day and not get beaten on a story by your competitors, you're cutting yourself another hole in the head to walk into Laird's office and say, "Listen, Melvin, on the record or not at all."

Under ideal circumstances, you do that and while you were doing it you could lay back and cultivate the office boys and the idealistic second lieutenants for leads. Slowly you could wire the place for sound, but while you were doing it, Melvin would be leaking background stories to the competition who'd be scoring on you daily.

That hurts because news, bad news, inaccurate news, unattributed news, misleading, false news, any kind of news is a salable commodity. One of the reporter's jobs has been to get it, no matter how wrong it subsequently is, and shoot it into the office where it will be packaged and sold.

Talk to most people in journalism and they can almost all give you variants of the story about the ferocious city editor who says, "Whenever I send you out on a story there's a story there somewhere, and don't come back without it."

Young people in the business learn that the worst thing they can say on the phone to their desks is, "I don't know." You're taught to know even when you don't know because you're out there rounding up the product.

Most editors would be more than irritated at this description of the orders under which their people work; they would take it as an attack on their integrity when, in fact, it's merely a sketch of the institutional pressures that everybody in the news business, the editors included, are subject to. It is this that makes Bradlee's action both so commendatory and significant.

* * *

What he has done is to put into effect what we're always claiming in the news business, that is, that we are something in addition to being a business, and that what we're handling is something other than a commodity. He's saying that we're willing to be beaten, to be scooped, to let our economic competitors get the jump on us, that what we print has values other than monetary.

A Night at the Movies

RUSSELL BAKER

My wife and I went to the movies. It cost $2.50 apiece.

We did not buy popcorn, which cost 50 cents; an iced beverage, which costs 25 cents; or a candy bar, which cost 35 cents and looked big enough to feed a committee.

When the house had darkened, a cartoon was shown. In the cartoon a hot-tempered man on roller skates was run over three or four times by speeding automobiles, propelled into a hole and bombed, dropped onto a red-hot stove and severly burned, and struck on the head by a falling cannonball.

The featured film began on a pastoral note. There was some pretty footage of English moor land at the edge of the sea and of an English village.

While we were still enjoying the memory of the scenery, a man in the local pub grabbed another man's hand, forced it palm-down over the rim of a glass and squeezed until the glass shattered and the palm was shredded.

* * *

After awhile, at a more or less remote house on the moors, a man opened his bedroom closet door and found his wife's strangled cat hanging inside.

The man decided to drive to the village. Some workmen he had hired to do odd jobs at his house set off ahead of him in a truck and tried to manoeuver him into a head-on collision with another truck. He escaped.

Meanwhile, back at his house, his wife was raped after having been twice punched hard on the jaw. Her attacker, one of the odd-job men, was threatened with a shotgun by one of his colleagues, who then raped the wife again.

At a church party a mentally disturbed man broke the neck of a flirtatious girl.

Running across the dark foggy moor in the night, the mentally disturbed man was then hit by a car.

The driver — it was our protagonist, the husband — took the accident victim to the more or less remote house on the moors.

Soon the murdered girl's father appeared with a shotgun and the churlish odd-job men. They threw large rocks through the windows of the husband's barricaded house.

A magistrate arrived and was murdered by a shotgun blast at close range when he tried to dissuade the murdered girl's father from destroying the house.

Repeated shotgun blasts were fired into the house. Most of the furnishings were destroyed or splattered with blood. One of the odd-job men threw several live rats into the house.

The besieged husband put the mentally disturbed man upstairs where, happening upon the wife he undertook to break her neck. Before he could do so the husband managed to calm him.

Meanwhile, downstairs on the stove, some water which the husband had been heating finally reached the boiling point. The husband used it to scald one of the workmen about to burst through a window. Some of the other workmen began breaking every pane in a greenhouse outside.

The murdered girl's father, shotgun protruding before him, finally stepped through a window. The husband, using a club, struck the shotgun barrel a downward blow. The shotgun went off and destroyed the foot of the murdered girl's father.

"There will be a few paragraphs about this in the London Sunday papers," my wife murmured.

The husband used a crowbar to beat to death the man who had been throwing live rats into the house.

Upstairs, another of the odd-job men — what in the world has socialism done to the British working class? — was taking advantage of the downstairs tumult by trying to tear off the wife's clothing.

* * *

The workman who had just completed this killing then tumbled down the stairs in a fist fight with the husband. Down there, in front of the fireplace, the husband managed to spring a huge steel animal trap around the murderous workman's head.

Apparently dying in intense agony, the man with his head in the steel jaws was thrashing through a lingering camera shot when an unidentifiable man — could he possibly have been the preacher from the church party? — rushed into the house and tried to murder the husband.

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

CEDAR — The Social Credit government of British Columbia is failing the people of the province and that failure can be measured by what is happening to the people, says veteran NDP MLA Robert Strachan.

Strachan, who on June 12 completes 20 years as MLA for the Cowichan-Malahat constituency, said more people are on social welfare than ever before, more senior citizens have nowhere to go when they need care and attention, taxpayers are dissatisfied with the present educational system and recreational facilities are inadequate.

"I feel the objectives of society should be to serve the people," the former opposition leader said.

"The current government uses the dollar for a yardstick to measure success rather than the type of people being produced or the quality of life they have."

It's industry that benefits most from Premier Bennett's policy, Strachan said. "He uses the trickle-down attitude. He figures what is good for industry is good for the province because it will trickle down to the people."

TREES FOR CUTTING?

The government has to abandon the attitude that "every tree is there to be cut down," and introduce more equitable taxation to achieve a greater return from less exploitation of B.C.'s resources.

Strachan summed up the argument like this: "It's futile to bring about an increase in our gross national product if, in achieving this economic success, we have to destroy the beauty, natural resources and future of the province."

During Strachan's 20-year stint as MLA he has been re-elected to office six times and served as Opposition leader for 13. He resigned as leader in 1969 because he felt that new blood and new leadership would help the New Democratic Party.

When Strachan was first elected in 1952 he had been an active member of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party for seven years. At that time he was a foreman for a construction company in Nanaimo, a member of the Carpenters' Union and father of two boys and a girl.

POLITICAL LEGWORK

As a member of a trade union and one of the people who set up the first credit union in B.C. (in Powell River in 1939), "it was brought forcibly home to me that there was another leg to the stool to keep it upright," Strachan said.

Government Failing B.C.'s Future -Strachan

"The political leg is the most important," he emphasized. "So many decisions are made affecting economics and the social life of the individual."

Strachan was elected to government at the same time the Social Credit party and Bennett came to power.

Strachan remained provincial leader when the party changed from CCF to the New Democratic Party in 1961. Strachan's constituency was expanded to include Cowichan-Malahat in 1966. He now represents 21,000 people.

SAME GOALS

Although the party changed its name it did not change its objective, Strachan says. He said the NDP still has the desire to establish a society with new and better standards.

"Our policy to achieve this is displayed in our attitude over the handling of the province's natural resources as well as our urging for pollution control, medical service to everyone and education to everyone who has the ability to benefit from it."

Strachan feels that although the current medical care system is close to what his party was pushing for, it still does not include all of the people. He believes that medical care should not be financed through premiums but through taxation.

"We won't be able to achieve this until doctors have re-organized their medical service and the government has provided increased medical training services," he added.

CHANGE OF PACE

As opposition leader Strachan found he had to be familiar with almost every issue while he spent most of his time travelling the province visiting almost every community talking to different groups in society.

At times Strachan found his role to be "a tough job and very frustrating." Since he resigned as opposition leader over two years ago he has found the pace much more relaxing.

The 58-year-old politician, whose only occupation has been in this field since 1956, said now he has more time to concentrate on his constituency, he is able to pursue "my frustrated interest" in art and do more fishing.

Except for the three months that he spends in the legislature each year, Strachan said he enjoys being able to spend more time in Cedar, a small community south of Nanaimo, where he has lived for the past 15 years.

Fund Pinch Stalls Park In Duncan

DUNCAN — City council will not be able to develop its Rotary park on the Cowichan River as planned due to the lack of funds in the provincial-federal employment loan program.

Duncan has applied for $60,000 for the project.

Mayor Jim Quaife said hope has not been abandoned as J. P. Taylor, administrative officer of the Municpal Affairs department, said the city's application will be kept on file in case more federal money becomes available or another project is cancelled. Quaife said he would look into another federal scheme known as the Local Initiative Loan program as a possible source of funds for the park.

N-Pact Doubted

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Eisaku Sato has quoted President Nixon as saying "I have no confidence" in convincing China and France to sign the treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons.

UNANIMOUS choice as 1972 chairman of the Cowichan Valley Regional Board is William Wyllie of Saltair, elected Wednesday in Duncan. Wyllie, vice-chairman last year, also chaired the Regional Hospital Board in 1971. North Cowichan Ald. Don Morton is now vice-chairman of the regional board.

INSPECTOR FIRST —CAMPBELL

DUNCAN — A building inspector must be hired before any bylaws dealing with land use can be instituted, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell advised Cowichan Valley Regional Board directors Wednesday evening.

Previously the department had given its blessing to zoning bylaw proposals and the regional board had spent many months with professional planners framing bylaws which were later rejected by the department.

"I gather from the staff there is a great deal of confusion about our attitude towards implementing land use control bylaws in the Cowichan Valley Regional District," Campbell said in his letter.

He referred to correspondence from Deputy Minister Baird in which the nexessity of a building inspector "was clearly stated."

Directors claim "there was no such thing mentioned" when they first introduced the planning proposal.

Directors agreed to advise Campbell that provisions had been made last year to conform with the new government requirements.

Three Styles Fuse in Plaza Suite

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

When you come to examine it closely, Neil Simon's Plaza Suite is not only three separate playlets, but the playlets themselves represent three different comedy styles.

The is no connecting link, no relationship other than the hotel suite setting, therefore no continuity.

But there is a theatrically artful arrangement of the three styles by which we are shown first, a poignant situation touched with wry humor, then a light seduction scene and to top it all, a hilarious farce that ends the evening with a belly laugh.

First time on stage in Victoria, Bastion Theatre presents Plaza Suite at McPherson Playhouse this week.

Some productions of the play have used six actors to portray the three couples who separately occupy the suite referred to in the title. But director Edwin Stephenson has elected to follow the New York original and feature only two actors throughout.

FORTUNATE CASTING

He is fortunate in his casting of guest artists Nonnie Griffin and Frank Aldous. Not only are they are a pair of capable actors, but they have a comfortable familiarity with the material, having previously played the roles in Fredericton, N.B.

Miss Griffin's comedy timing is beautiful to watch, she has charm and a lively personality and her performance is not only technically sound but it has clarity and freshness.

Aldous also has an ability to command the stage with ease and a sure sense of comedy.

He was especially effective and wholly successful in contrasting the roles in episode two — the "famous Hollywood producer" in wolf's clothing out to seduce his hometown sweetheart — and episode three — the frustrated father whose daughter, moments before her wedding, has locked herself in the suite's bathroom and remains deaf to all pleas and threats.

This very good team deserved more professional support from the bit players than they received in this instance.

The opening episode was the least successful from both directing and acting viewpoints.

TRYING TO HARD

There was a tendency to try hard for laughs, to attempt broad comedy in a situation in which an aging wife desparately tries to reach her husband through the nostalgic ploy of spending their wedding anniversary in the honeymoon setting of the Plaza Hotel suite.

Even her fumbling failure to get the date and the room number right is a mockery that has a poignant ring like the echo of a cry for help in an empty landscape.

These qualities are missed just as the sense of the suite's two rooms is missed, both by the stage design and the director's use of it.

The sets, aside from the dividing of the rooms, is adequate and professional looking in detail and lighting and costumes are satisfactory.

Nuclear Power Said Cheaper For Island's Electricity

A nuclear plant on Vancouver Island would produce electricity at about half the cost of power from a natural gas-fired plant, Mayor Trevor Davis of North Saanich told an Optimist Club meeting Wednesday night.

Davis said a nuclear plant would employ about 2,000 persons over a five-year construction period and boost efforts to introduce secondary manufacturing industry.

He also claimed that atomic energy "will produce electricity with less effect on the environment than any other method."

Davis who has acted as consulting engineer for both B.C. Hydro and Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., said basic economics "overwhelmingly" favor the use of atomic fuel to generate the Island's power needs.

The cost of this type of energy would be about 4.5 mills per kilowatt hour, compared with about 8.5 mills for power from natural gas.

The minimum necessary capital expenditure on a gas pipeline could only be justified by the volume of gas which would be needed for electric power generation, Davis said.

"Without this demand the remaining requirements for industrial and domestic heating would be so small that the fixed charges for amortizing the pipeline investment would make the delivered gas prohibitively expensive."

He noted that industrial demand, principally for pulp mills to supplement hog-fuel, is variable and unsuited to pipeline delivery. It would be impossible to deliver gas at prices which would compete with fuel brought in by tankship.

"There are far more economical ways to transmit the small quantities of gas needed for domestic heating and cooking. Thus the entire deal hinges upon whether or not electricity can be generated economically from natural gas on Vancouver Island."

GIUSTI DISGUSTED

SAN MARTINO, Italy (UPI) — The Rev. P. Giusti was halfway through mass when he noticed the miniskirted girls in the church.

He stopped the service.

"I will not go on until these indecently-dressed girls leave," said the 60-year-old priest.

They left. Giusti hurried through the service, shooed out his flock and locked the church doors. He stayed inside the church, listening while parishioners argued and shouted.

Most were mad at Giusti, already the topic of a raging debate over his 'tactful' method of dealing with Communist party meetings. Giusti rings the church bells during party meetings, amplifying the sound to a deafening roar.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 20-year-old man, caught stealing gas from a parked truck Jan. 5, was sentenced to 45 days in jail Wednesday by Judge William Ostler.

Aloysius Klampfer, 916 Caledonia, pleaded guilty to theft Wednesday.

Court was told that the accused was apprehended about 1 a.m. Jan. 5 pouring gas into his vehicle from a five-gallon container.

A length of garden hose was found near the truck the gas was taken from and it smelled of gas.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Klampfer had a previous record including convictions for theft and possession of stolen property.

Robert F. Churchill, 19, of 2646 Cook, was given a suspended sentence with an 18-month probation for six counts of false pretences.

He pleaded guilty earlier.

Churchill wrote six worthless cheques, totalling $288, during November and December at an optical shop and several local department stores.

Eleanor K. Streeter, 18, of Cobble Hill, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a one-year probation for a single count of false pretences.

Ostler said he couldn't understand the "foolish mania" of persons experimenting in the use of illicit drugs, adding that often such people find themselves "so hooked then their lives are ruined."

"Are you really resolved to give up drugs?" he asked the accused.

The girls said she was. The judge had noted from a presentence report that she had tried various drugs from marijuana to heroin.

The girl was convicted earlier of using the credit card of another person Dec. 20 to pay for $72 worth of clothes at Simpsons-Sears department store. The card had been reported lost by the owner several months earlier.

Ostler ruled Tuesday that a 43-year-old Port Alberni man charged with attempted murder would not be released without bail under the new Bail Reform Act.

Ostler accepted the evidence of prosecutor John Macintyre against no-bail release and said the accused, Joseph McKenna, could be released on two sureties totalling $10,000.

Ostler originally set bail at $20,000 and this was later reduced to $11,000.

When McKenna was still in custody Jan. 3 unable to raise bail and the new Bail Reform Act became effective, prosecutor Macintyre was given to Tuesday to show why the accused should not be released on his word pending his preliminary hearing Feb. 15 and 16.

Billions at Stake Depending on What Formula Is Used

OTTAWA (CP) — The difference between 25 x A4 and 30 x A1 amounts to billions of dollars western Canada's natural gas industry could obtain over the next 20 years.

25 x A4 is a formula used by the National Energy Board in estimating what natural gas should be reserved for Canadian needs before exports are permitted. The estimated requirements of the fourth year from the present are multiplied by 25.

But the Alberta energy conservation board multiplies A1 contracted requirements for the coming year by 30 to determine what reserves should be kept for Alberta use.

In November, the energy board rejected applications to export 2.7 trillion cubic feet of Alberta gas, valued at $1 billion.

Its formula then showed a 1.1-trillion-cubic-foot shortage, although the board said it was confident the shortage would be made up through development of new gas fields.

PROTEST DECISION

Alberta and the western gas industry protested the decision, saying the board was keeping too much gas tied up unproductively.

The 25 x A4 formula now may play a crucial role in determining the outcome of an application to export more than $1 billion of ethane and propane to the energy-hungry U.S.

"Using A4 as a base year involves guessing what circumstances will be four years hence," the brief said, adding that such a guess would be impossible.

A common western accusation during the last export hearings was that the Ontario gas utilities—the major Canadian gas consumers—were exaggerating their estimates of fourth-year needs.

FORECAST GROWTH

The utilities countered with glowing forecasts for the growth of the Canadian gas market and hints that the gas producers were too optimistic in their estimates of how much new gas would be found.

The Alberta brief says eastern gas utilities had contracted for 21 times their 1971 requirements by last June, leaving the western producer with an additional 9.7 trillion cubic feet of gas that had to stay in the ground to meet the requirements of 25 x A4.

The brief also says there is no other business "where the producer of the product is forced, if he wishes to sell in an export market, at his own cost to maintain a huge surplus reserve against the possible future but uncontracted requirements of the retailer."

If the 25 x A4 requirement is continued, the brief says, Alberta could eventually end up with 20 per cent of its gas reserves sitting unsold in the ground—12 trillion cubic feet.

SUGGESTS RANGE

While strongly urging the use of A1, the Alberta government said it does not want to name any specific multiplier, but suggests 20 to 25.

Tied in with the formula controversy is the possibility of vast gas discoveries in the Arctic.

NEW CHAIRMAN of the Bank of Nova Scotia is Thomas A. Boyles, 65. He succeeds F. William Hicks who died Jan. 4 in Toronto.

Financial Community Accepts MFA

The Toronto-based financial community has accepted the B.C. Municipal Financing Authority and seeks new bond issues to place with investors.

This was the reaction of its chairman, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis on his return from an orientation visit to Bay Street, where he found the MFA is considered "unique in Canada in that it is not a government department."

He said representatives of banks, trusts, financial institutions and the financial press were intrigued by the concept of having elected representatives on the financing authority.

40 AT MEETINGS

At a meeting of some 40 persons from the financial community, Curtis found them to be responsive, positive and enthusiastic.

Having sold its first $20 million issue in the New York market to establish itself last year, the authority disposed of a $1.3 million clean-up issue in the Canadian market and is now considering a further $7.5 million issue in Canada.

"We are now receiving requests for more current funding and will probably go to market in several weeks, depending on market conditions," Curtis said.

WELL LAUNCHED

"I think the authority is now well launched. I'm extremely happy about it. Bay Street likes the province and the municipalities and regional districts of the province," he added.

Curtis said he encountered the reaction that if the MFA was "good enough for New York, it's good enough for Toronto." He said there was "no doubt our move into the U.S. market first has paid dividends."

With the chairman was W. K. Smith, of the municipal affairs department, and MFA treasurer Bill Long, who remained in the East in order to meet Montreal financial people next week.

Murphy

Net income for 1971 is approximately $4.4 million or $1.52 a common share after payment of dividends on preferred shares, reports Murphy Oil Co. Ltd.

A non-recurring gain, realized from sub-chartering a tanker, amounted to $843,000 (30 cents).

In 1970, net income was $2.35 million ($1.73).

Cash flow for 1971, the firm said was $8.4 million ($2.97) compared with $4.97 million ($1.73) in 1970.

Afton

Encouraging values in copper are reported by Afton Mines Ltd. from assays done on cores of five drill holes bored on property 10 miles west of Kamloops.

Efforts are being made to establish boundaries on the ore body, estimated at 20 million tons. Percussion and diamond drilling continues.

Kelly-Deyong

First half results to Aug. 31 produced a smaller net loss on lower revenue, reports Kelly-Deyong Sound Corp. Ltd., of Vancouver.

Sales were $1.2 million against $1.4 million in the period a year previous, and net loss was $110,014 compared with $173,585 loss 12 months earlier.

PanCana

PanCana Industries Ltd. of Calgary has acquired Strom Fisheries Inc. of Tacoma.

The U.S. commercial fishing company owns an interest in five ocean-going super seiners with tonnage ranging between 1,500 and 1,900 tons, now employed in tuna fishing in international waters.

PanCana is a general industrial company involved in petroleum geophysical exploration, marketing of heavy earth-moving equipment, oil well drilling, pipeline and road construction, and electronics.

H. Walker

Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. reports net income of $15.63 million ($1 cents a share) for the first quarter to Nov. 30, compared $15.2 million (88 cents) a year earlier.

Net sales for the quarter totalled $241.67 million and $234.27 million a year earlier.

The company said income during the latest quarter was reduced to $2.23 million from $17.85 million or 13 cents a share because of foreign exchange losses.

PanCanadian

Amalgamation of Central-Del Rio Oils Ltd. and Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas Ltd. is official, the new company reports.

The amalgamation formed PanCanadian Petroleum Ltd., which is incorporated under the Canada Corporations Act.

PanCanadian possesses all the rights, properties, privileges and franchises of the former companies, and is subject to previous commitments.

Shares of PanCanadian are convertible into shares of the amalgamated company as fully paid and non-assessable on a one-for-one basis.

Capital Outlay To Decline

Further decline in capital outlays by the B.C.-Yukon mining industry this year is foreseen by Chamber of Mines president E. H. Caldwell.

In his 1971 annual report this week Caldwell cited a 25 per cent drop in exploration spending in the two areas.

"From present indications it appears that there will be a further reduction in 1972. This is serious, for it is of the utmost importance that the mineral industry maintain an active, aggressive program of exploration in the continuing search for new sources of minerals," Caldwell said.

In a separate report, chamber manager Thomas Elliott placed full blame on federal tax legislation and drew attention to the fact that 70 geologists and mining engineers are unemployed in Vancouver.

INCENTIVES

Reinstatement of tax incentives will restore vitality to the industry, which Elliott said is essential to Western Canada's economy.

Most of the 7.4 per cent increase in mineral production last year in B.C. was due to the coal output for Japanese steel mills.

Caldwell referred to government totals showing $521 million worth of mineral products were mined in B.C. while in the Yukon production went up 21.3 per cent to $94 million. Canadian production rose $200 million to $5.9 billion.

Metal mining was not as good as it could have been, due to price depression, but coal accounted for nearly all the increase in total value, up from $19 million to $50 million.

The chamber marks its 60th anniversary this year, claiming membership of 1,600 compared with 25 founders.

Mines Deputy Will Retire

Ken Blakey, 63, B.C. deputy of mines and petroleum resources, will be retiring within the next two months, it was announced at the 60th annual meeting of the B.C. and Yukon Chamber of Mines in Vancouver.

A succession hasn't been named.

Blakey has been deputy minister for five years and a B.C. civil servant for 49 years. He was honored with a presentation by the chamber.

He resides at 2885 Ashley in Saanich.

BULKLEY VALLEY LOOKING FOR BUYER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bulkley Valley Forest Industries Ltd. confirmed Wednesday it is negotiating with Northwood Pulp Co. of Prince George, and others on the possible sale of its large timber holdings and sawmill operations in the north-central interior of British Columbia.

President Derek Currie of Vancouver said negotiations are under way "which could lead to divestment of all or part of the shares held by the partners."

Bulkley Valley Forest Industries is jointly owned by Bowaters Canadian Corporation, a subsidiary of Bowaters Corporation of England, and Consolidated Bathurst Ltd. of Montreal.

Currie said the talks have been under way for more than a month and he expects a decision will be reached in another month.

Fossil Fuel Production Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Production of fossil fuels — natural gas, gas byproducts, crude petroleum and coal — is estimated at $2 billion for 1971, compared with $1.7 billion a year earlier, reports Statistics Canada.

The year's production included $318.5 million in natural gas, $202.5 million in gas byproducts, $1.35 billion in crude oil, and $133.9 million in coal.

Comparable figures for 1970 were $315.1 million in gas, $160.1 million in byproducts, $1.16 billion in crude and $86.1 million in coal.

Six Brokers Before Exchange Over Stock Ruse

By CAROLE MARTIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Representatives of six brokerage houses go before the New York Stock Exchange beginning today to explain how a 19-year-old college student purchased $200,000 worth of stock by telephone without putting up a penny in cash.

"I'd call them up and say I was interested in starting an account," Abraham H. Treff said Wednesday in Philadelphia, his home.

"They would ask a few questions and I would ask a few questions and the account would be open."

In Washington, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission reported it, too, was looking into "the ease with which he (Treff) was able to conduct his transactions as well as his own conduct."

Lee Arning, senior vice-president for operations at the big board, said Treff called 25 brokerage firms in an attempt to open accounts over the phone, but was turned down by 19.

SIX BELIEVED HIM

"Six firms unfortunately believed some of the misrepresentations that he made to them, did not obtain funds, and some may not have taken all the steps necessary to inform themselves as to his financial status and responsibility," Arning said.

The firms involved were Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith; Reynolds Securities Inc.; Paine, Weber, Jackson and Curtis; White Weld and Co.; Voisin and Co. Inc., and Yarnall, Biddle and Co.

Those firms which would comment said they also were looking into the matter to see whether any rules had been violated or whether procedures should be tightened.

Treff made no cash profit on the transactions. It was not immediately determined if he had shown a paper profit or loss.

Treff started college-level business classes for the first time Wednesday night at St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia.

'BUYING' STARTS NOV. 30

In a television interview, Treff said he made his first transaction Nov. 30 by buying $1,300 worth of stock through the Philadelphia office of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith.

Then he said he opened accounts with the other firms and ran up transactions totalling $200,000.

In no case, Treff said, did he appear at their offices or sign papers opening an account.

Treff said he gave each broker a bank reference, but the average of $400 he kept in the account would not warrant stock purchases costing several thousand dollars.

Treff reported his dealings in person to the exchange Tuesday. But the big board's Arning said the transactions were spotted under "stock-watch procedures" last week and that an investigation had been under way.

Fight Shaping Between PM, Business

By GERALD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — A pitched battle is developing between Prime Minister Trudeau's government and big business over the future of the proposed competition bill. It could be a major election issue.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford warns opponents that the bill, which would toughen the ground rules for business, has broad popular support.

It would be unwise, he says, for big business to line itself up against an electorate that is demanding change.

The brusque Basford, 39, introduced the bill last June and has made extensive efforts to draw comment on its details from those it would affect.

More than 300 corporate lawyers have come to Ottawa to discuss it with officials, and the officials have gone out in teams to explain it to the country.

The bill is undergoing revision and is to be reintroduced during the new session of Parliament, now expected to begin in February.

WON'T ALTER BILL

H. J. Hemeens, a vice-president of Du Pont of Canada Ltd., has told the Chemical Producers Association Mr. Basford has no intention of altering the bill substantially.

The Canadian Manufacturers Association wants it withdrawn for extensive overhaul. The Canadian Chamber of Commerce says a panel of businessmen should be included in the drafting process.

The Canadian Real Estate Association threatens to raise $100,000 to fight the bill, which vice-president Albert Fish calls "the most onerous, ominous and dangerous legislation to organized real estate."

The Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association group ownership of dailies is growing, says the proposed powers to prohibit or dissolve mergers are "unwarranted interference with freedom of the press . . ."

Business calls the bill "socialistic consumerism" and says it was drafted by academics out of touch with the "real world."

Mr. Basford replies that business itself may be out of touch dangerously so. He points to voting trends in recent elections and to the 60,000 complaints about business practices he says his department has received.

TAKE EFFECTIVE ACTION

"The message of what is expected of government is clear," he told the Central Canada Broadcasters Association. "Take effective action against the problems we face, or we'll elect someone who will regardless of party label or ideology."

Financial experts say the bill would alter drastically the rules by which business operates. The Times of London, after a first look, called the bill "probably the toughest set of business rules anywhere in the free world."

In a speech in Montreal Dec. 12, Mr. Trudeau said the government is making laws "for the good of the country," not farmers, workers or management.

The object is a country that is "free, prosperous and has social justice."

The iron-fisted provisions of the competition bill, under which corporate law-breakers could be fined up to $1 million and jailed two years for a first offence, would replace the Combines Investigation Act.

The combines act has proved ineffectual in trying to cope with monopolies and merger in the criminal courts. The new law would establish a competitive practices tribunal operating under civil law.

The seven-member tribunal would be able to prevent corporate giants from buying out competition or driving it out of business through price-fixing, price discrimination and other practices.

The tribunal also would be able to carry out public investigations into oligopolies where a small number of companies control an industry and take action to cut their power.

Main criticism of the proposed tribunal is that its powers would be too extensive and undefined, leaving business open to action for almost any agreement.

Federal studies in the 1960s said that probably every man, woman and child in the country is being affected by concentration of ownership in the food, housing, transport and clothing industries.

INCLUDES MANY FIELDS

Industries with heavy concentration of ownership and little evidence of price competition included: Sugar, breakfast cereals, gasoline, processed cheese, flour milling, beer, glass products, cookies, tires, soaps and cleansers, synthetic textiles, cement, gypsum and asbestos products, and light bulbs.

A royal commission on farm machinery reported that four international farm tractor companies had overcharged Canadian farmers by about $40 million in a three-year period through price-fixing.

Another royal commission on food prices found three companies making 90 per cent of breakfast cereals. They were earning, after taxes, profits equal to 32 per cent on their investment.

The first combines law was drafted in 1889 after MPs found monopolies driving up the price of coal, sugar and other staples in Toronto. But the Senate modified the bill, requiring proof of "undue influence" on a market.

HARD TO PROVE

Prosecutors found they practically had to prove the existence of a monopoly to get a conviction, and judges interpreted the "undue" requirements narrowly. Attempts during the 1960s to prosecute the sugar and brewing industries foundered on the question of "undie influence" on the market. What did "undue" mean?

The competition bill removes the "undulies" and provides an unambiguous prohibition on collusive and monopolistic actions.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in a brief to Mr. Basford, says this would open industry to prosecution even for trivial agreements and would "stifle almost all legitimate business activity."

Mr. Basford showed no sign of giving way.

"As the saying goes," he told the CMA, "you can't be a little pregnant. I fail to see how governmerit can accept that price-fixing agreements are all right so long as everyone doesn't do it."

Not all businessmen dislike the bill. Service station operators and auto dealers, for instance, would be able to appeal to the tribunal against franchise agreements that they say force them to maintain prices at a certain level, or carry a whole line of products to get the commodity they want.

Mr. Basford argues that the bill could check inflation by opening the market to more competition and greater efficiency.

He says, for instance, that every government in Canada has complained to him about identical tenders, which would be outlawed under the bill.

The Canadian Labor Congress and the Consumers Association of Canada have endorsed the bill, saying only that it doesn't go far enough.

It could enable Ottawa to crack down on professional groups doctors, lawyers, dentists, architects, even barbers for fee-setting, price-fixing and exclusion of competition.

PROVIDES LOOPHOLE

But the bill allows these groups to evade federal jurisdiction if their province inserts a public-interest clause in their governing act. In Quebec, legislation already has been introduced to enable 24 professional groups to escape federal jurisdiction.

But this undoubtedly will give the province a stronger hand in bargaining with such groups. And weaker provinces may opt to leave professionals under the federal eye.

Under the bill, the test of whether advertising is misleading would be whether it would fool a "credulous man" not the traditional test of whether a "reasonable man" would be deceived.

A typical reaction to this has come from the Graphic Arts Industries Association, whose 554 member printers handle thousands of catalogues and flyers.

"Surely Canadian society and Canadian law should not be evaluated in terms of gullible, childish minds," the association's brief says, decrying the "credulous man" test.

PRINTERS FEAR IT

Printers and publishers also fear they themselves, protected in the past by a "good faith" provision, would be open to prosecution for printing misleading advertising.

At the retail level guarantees and warranties that contained doubletalk could lead to prosecution.

Practices such as bait-and-switch selling, in which a non-existent bargain is used to lure customers for more expensive or shoddier goods, also would be considered criminal.

D. W. Henry, director of federal combines investigation and a potential chairman of the proposed tribunal, says the act is aimed at protecting what's left of the free market" in Canada.

"Not all businessmen will welcome the new policy," says Mr. Basford, with untypical understatement.

"The only businessmen who have cause to fear the competition act, or to regard it as anti-business, are those who fear competition itself."

Mitchell Shelves Pipeline Probe

WASHINGTON (CP) — An associate of consumer advocate Ralph Nader has testified that Attorney-General John Mitchell shelved a proposed investigation into the possible anti-trust aspects of the proposed Alaska pipeline.

The trans-Alaska pipeline system, a joint venture in which at least 80 per cent of the stock is owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Atlantic-Richfield Co., and British Petroleum, is proposed to carry perhaps two million barrels of oil a day from Alaska's vast North Slope field.

Beverly Moore, representing the Corporate Accountability Research Group, one of the "Nader's Raiders" operations, testified that if any anti-competitive arrangements were in fact involved in the consortium, the "inflationary consequences" would be enormous.

He appeared before a joint House-Senate economic committee hearing on the oil industry which today heard a spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute charge that "comparisons of relative costs of domestic and foreign petroleum have been misleading."

Dr. Richard Gonzalez, a petroleum economist, said this was because price comparisons emphasized only crude oil prices and did not take into account the higher price of imported natural gas.

QUOTA SYSTEM RAPPED

However, Representative Les Aspin (Dem. Wis.) testified that the U.S. oil import quota system is a "crystal clear example of a subsidy of the rich."

Supported by eight other midwestern congressmen, Aspin told the hearings under Senator William Proxmire (Dem. Wis.) that the quota system costs American consumers billions a year.

He and his colleagues proposed several alternatives which they said would ensure the national security at a much lower cost.

They suggested a national reserve system which would keep a one-year supply of oil in reserve within the U.S. for use in a national emergency. They also recommended substituting a tariff system for the present quota, an idea also approved several years ago by a cabinet-level committee named by President Nixon but never acted upon.

Moore testified that the justice department's anti-trust division requested a formal investigation into ownership of the Alaska pipeline. The request was forwarded to Mitchell's office for "what would have been routine approval," Moore said, but the attorney-general rejected the idea.

Consumers Suggest Reforms

The provincial government was urged Wednesday to set up two new departments to enforce consumer protection and pollution control standards.

In a brief presented to a cabinet committee, the B.C. branch of the Consumers Association of Canada also called for the government to permit "class actions" in the courts, enabling consumers to band together to protect their rights.

Current law restricts actions to specific suits for specific damages which an individual must demonstrate are materially different from those suffered by others in the same "class" of persons affected.

Such actions would enable better protection of public rights against particular business interests, the brief said.

A bureau of consumer affairs should be part of a new department of consumer affairs, the brief said, suggesting one of the three women cabinet ministers could head the department.

Another woman minister no names were suggested could head a department of environmental resources to increase protection against pollution, the brief said.

Other requests were: Tighter bonding of automobile dealers and itinerant sellers; increased protection for consumers under the Mechanics Lien Act and in "seize or sue" situations; tighter control of dating bureaus, spas, dance schools and charter flight bookings and repeal of the Synthetic Foods Act.

For Good Cause

PHILADELPHIA (Reuter) — Police said an 18-year-old student, arrested Wednesday after a $145 holdup at the Philadelphia gasworks office, told them he needed the money to return to college to study criminology. Andrew Almond was charged with armed robbery.

Bruin 'Syrup' Turns From the Uphill Path

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

New Westminster Bruins defeated Victoria Cougars 6-3 in their Western Canada Hockey League meeting Wednesday evening at Memorial Arena, and that just about convinced Ernest (Punch) McLean that "the syrup finally has stopped running uphill."

There was a time when McLean, coach and manager of the Bruins, wondered. He had more than his share of problems in 1971. . . .

Last spring he lost his left eye but, miraculously, walked away from a plane crash on the Prairies.

Then centre Lorne Henning, the slick centre who was supposed to lead Bruins to an all-conquering march through the Western Canada League, was sidelined by hepatitis. The Westminsters had to struggle to come within shouting distance of the advance notices shoved their way.

There was tragedy, too, when Barry Smith, one of New Westminster's brightest young rearguards, was killed in an early-December automobile mishap.

Now it's 1972.

The syrup, indeed, has stopped running uphill.

Kogler, indirectly, and Williams, directly, came to the Bruins through the courtesy of the last-place Vancouver Nats, and neither is hurting New Westminster's surge.

Kogler scored two goals and Williams popped one against the late-starting Cougars to keep the syrup moving in the proper direction for McLean.

The Nats' brain trust dealt Williams and defenceman Larry Sokoloski to the Bruins for 17-year-old Doug Shantz, a forward who had been playing in the West Coast Junior "B" league.

McLean put his leash on Williams but traded Sokoloski to Swift Current Broncos for Kogler. Williams has popped in four goals in four games while Kogler has five goals in three skates as a Bruin.

The acquisition of the new wingers, at a quick look, seems to have given McLean some of the balance he has been hoping to achieve.

Martineau Connects on Deflection

Don Martineau also scored a pair of goals Wednesday, both on deflections, while Les Jackson accounted for the other as the Bruins took charge in the first two periods.

Never intimidated, the Bruins skated to a 3-0 first-period lead and made it 6-1 after the second. Two unanswered goals in the third period enabled Cougars to fight back for a slight degree of respectability.

Rookie centre Ron Poole, with a pair, and defenceman Murray Kennett scored Victoria's goals. The pair, along with Gary Donaldson, were among the few Cougars who put effort into the game from start to finish.

Kennett, in addition to scoring his goal, was a standout on defence. He was on the ice for only one of the six New Westminster goals.

It was an extremely tame affair, with Bruins drawing five penalties and the Cougars four — all minors. Poole scored his first goal while the Cougars enjoyed a man advantage, but it was Westminster's power-play that proved more devastating.

Martineau got both of his goals and Kogler one while the Cougars were shorthanded. Martineau's first of the night, providing Bruins with a 4-1 lead, was a crusher. It came a second before Cougars threatened to kill off a two-man disadvantage.

Cooper in Speed Festival High on U.S. Honor List

In a sport which does not always respect the skill of the competitors, a 50-year-old Victoria man is going to drive his one-time pit boy's racing car at a track he once learned to hate.

Dave Cooper is a plumber by trade — "like my father before me" — and a race driver by choice — "I've been at it for 27 years, and I've spent very little more than I've won. It's been an inexpensive hobby."

His former pit boy, recruited at age 15, now is 32, a city businessman, and Dick Midgley is still building excellent race cars. "Sure it's expensive, but I love it."

This week Cooper and Midgley, as they have done so often in the past, get together again, and with their hand-picked crew — Ted MacKenzie, Herb Pickup, Ian Vantreight, and later, Ross MacIntyre, head for Riverside, Calif., and a speed festival high on the honor list of American road racing.

"Call it a challenge," said Dave, of his decision to drive owner Midgley's car in the $100,000 Winston Western 500 a week from Sunday at the track where the two other Victorians made contrasting headlines before them.

It was at Riverside in 1967 that Billy Foster, a cousin of Vantreight's, was killed. Cooper was crewing for Foster that day, and "I got to hate that track right then, for what it had done," he admitted.

"If I've changed my mind, it's probably because I feel that with all the safety improvements over the past few years, actually the crash that caused Foster's death, wouldn't have caused it today."

Equipment Has Changed Since Then

Cooper cited several factors in dismissing the pall of morbidity that every race driver must face, and Foster succumbed to.

"(1) The helmets now cover the whole head; you couldn't even play football today with the old ones; (2) We have a nylon mesh (window) that Billy didn't have; (3) Brakes are different now; they can't blow now as his did that day; (4) My suit is Nomex, fireproof; Billy didn't have that type; (5) and since that accident, they've changed the track, and taken out that dangerous curve."

If that was the bad, last year was the good. Victoria's Gary Kershaw made history by winning the Permatex 200, a lesser event, to be sure, than the Western 500, but a notable triumph.

Cooper was there then because Midgley was there, and had a car running in the same race. But they were doomed to quick disappointment when the car driven by Norm Ellison crashed in the seventh lap. "So let's forget that day," said Midgley.

"It was Dick's idea to try again," Cooper explained, "and when he asked me to drive, I thought I'd like to give it a try.

"I believe we have a good car," he said, of the 1970 Chevelle, which is powered by a 360 cu. inch engine. "It's a destroked 400," explained Midgley, "and the fact that we have a smaller block, which weighs about 150 pounds less than the big motors, should give better handling qualities."

"It's got a lot of hopes and dreams, this car," said Cooper. Or would you believe $20,000 worth, including about 4,000 man hours?

'Fun to Meet Fellows I've Read About

The goal, first, is to qualify for the race; then, hopefully, to finish. Victory will not be all important.

A several times city champion driver — "in the 50s I could do little wrong" — Cooper will be treated like a novice, and must even pass a driver's test. He should. He has raced almost everything on wheels, here and in the northwest, was second in the northwest championships in 1963, and won the Rose Cup at Portland that year.

So what's ahead in California in capsule view of a race driver in his biggest test?

"The crew is most important. They make the car go. I just drive. We have to think alike. Communication means getting the message across — now! It'll be fun to meet fellows I've read about such as Foyt, and Petty — I'll bet he has two cars and 10 engines. We've got one of each. I like it better in traffic than in a time trial; and if I qualify I'd like to finish the race."

"Racing," he added significantly," is not a real young man's game."

Coaches Blast Referees After Hockey Stalemates

By The Canadian Press

The usual hard knocks were evident in the National Hockey League Wednesday night but most of them came from coaches irate at what they considered poor calls by the referees.

The criticism no doubt was prompted by the stalemates in three of the four NHL games played.

Emile Francis, New York Ranger coach, criticized the work of referee Lloyd Gilmore and linesmen Neil Armstrong and Jim Christison after Chicago Black Hawks rallied to tie his team 5-5.

"The must have missed at least three offside calls against the Hawks," Francis said after the game. "Dennis Hull was at least five feet offside on his goal in the first period and both Jim Pappin and Pit Martin got in alone against Ed Giacomin in offsides in the last period. . . ."

Red Kelly, whose Pittsburgh Penguins tied Boston Bruins 2-2, stepped on the ice in the first period to protest what he considered a questionable call by referee Bob Sloan. He drew a bench penalty.

GLOVER BLAMES REF

And in Toronto, Fred Glover, whose Los Angeles Kings have been fighting all season to escape the NHL's West Division cellar, blamed a penalty call by referee Ron Wicks for the 1-1 tie Toronto Maple Leafs earned against the Kings.

"It was a cheap call by Wicks," Glover said.

Francis was more concerned with the work of the game officials than with his team's poor defensive play. The Rangers had a 4-2 lead against the Black Hawks going into the third period, but Bobby Hull and brother Dennis scored within three minutes of each other early in the period to give Chicago a 4-4 tie.

Rod Gilbert scored his 28th goal of the season to put New York back in the lead but Jerry Korab scored from 70 feet out late in the period to give the Black Hawks the tie.

HITS GOALIE'S GLOVE

Korab, who was deep in his own zone, had taken a pass from Keith Magnuson and dashed up the ice. As he approached the New York blue line, he let go a hard shot that struck Giacomin's left glove and deflected into the net.

"I really don't know what the puck did on the way in," Korab said. "I really didn't know whether I was going to shoot from where I was or not. But when I looked around I couldn't find any of our guys in position to take a pass so I just let fly.

The Bruins were held to their tie mainly through the sparkling goaltending of Jim Rutherford. The Penguin goalie faced 28 shots, 19 in the last two periods.

He held the high-scoring line of Wayne Cashman, Phil Esposito and Ken Hodge scoreless although Esposito did set up Ed Westfal for the tying goal.

Voters Pick Five Rangers

EASTERN ALL-STARS

MONTREAL (CP) — Selectors didn't look beyond New York Rangers, Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins to pick the 12-man nucleus of the East Division team which will oppose the West Division squad in the National Hockey League's 25th annual all-star game, Jan. 25, at Bloomington, Minn.

The Rangers, division leaders at the half-way mark of the 78-game schedule, placed five members on the team, selected by a poll of East Division members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association and announced by the league today.

The Bruins, second to New York at the mid-way point, placed three men on the team, including the only unanimous choice — defenceman Bobby Orr — while the Canadiens, currently third, had four players selected.

Voting was based on five points for a first-place ballot, three for a second and one for a third. The team, with vote totals bracketed:

Goal — Ken Dryden, Montreal (99); Gilles Villemure, New York (50). Defence — Bobby Orr, Boston (105); Brad Park, New York (99); J. C. Tremblay, Montreal (61); Dallas Smith, Boston (26). Centre — Phil Esposito, Boston (97; Jean Ratelle, New York (61). Left wing — Vic Hadfield, New York (95); Frank Mahovlich, Montreal (55). Right wing — Rod Gilbert, New York (99); Yvan Cournoyer, Montreal (45).

Two of the four Canadiens picked — goalie Dryden and Mahovlich — currently are out of action, but both are expected back by the all-star break. Dryden is recuperating from a back injury, while Mahovlich is battling the flu and tonsilitis.

Al MacNeil, general manager of the Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League, will select an additional seven players before he coaches the East squad. MacNeil earned the right to coach the East when he guided the Canadiens to the Stanley Cup last May. He will be opposed by Billy Reay of Chicago, whose Black Hawks lost to the Canadiens in the cup final.

The only restriction placed on MacNeil and Reay in their selections of additional seven players for each team is that each of the seven teams in the respective divisions must have at least one representative in the game.

Power and experience are the underlying strength in the East selections. The 10 defencemen and forwards chosen have accounted for 195 goals, 297 assists and 492 points. This compares to the total 116 goals, 162 assists and 278 points collected by the 10 defencemen and forwards of the West Division all-stars, announced Tuesday.

The only player on the East Squad without previous all-star experience is Dryden, who is still considered a rookie and who won the Conn Smythe Trophy last spring as the outstanding player of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

BIG M IS VET

Mahovlich is the all-star game veteran, having appeared in 12 games. He is tied with Ted Lindsay, the former Detroit Red Wings' left winger, for second place in the all-time list of all-star game point leaders. Each had 10 points, Mahovlich scoring six goals.

Dream Night For Hoop Boss

By The Associated Press

Wednesday night was the kind of night National Basketball Association commissioner Walter Kennedy dreams about:

Four games on the NBA schedule — two were decided by one point, two were decided by two points.

What's more, the three teams with the best records in the NBA — Los Angeles Lakers, Milwaukee Bucks and Chicago Bulls — all were beaten, adding some support to the old claim that on any given night. . . .

The Lakers, 39-3 on the season prior to Sunday, lost for the second time in three games when Tom Van Arsdale sank a 15-foot jumper with just one second showing on the clock to give Cincinnati Royals a 108-107 decision.

The Bucks, who ended Los Angeles' record 33-game winning skein Sunday, lost their second in a row when Lou Hudson poured in 20 points in the second half to lift Atlanta Hawks to a 104-102 victory over Milwaukee.

FREE THROW WINS IT

And the Bulls, trying to gain ground on Milwaukee in the NBA's Midwest Division race, were thwarted when Don Nelson tipped in a shot by Jo Jo White with three seconds left, then added a free throw to give Boston Celtics a 113-112 decision over Chicago.

In the other NBA game, Bob Kauffman sank a pair of free throws with two seconds left to lift Buffalo to a 111-109 upset of Philadelphia.

In the only American Basketball Association game of the night, Dallas climbed out of the ABA West Division cellar by dumping Denver 107-102, moving ahead of the Rockets into fourth place.

SKI CONDITIONS

Skiers can still expect to find excellent conditions at both Vancouver Island areas this weekend.

Temperatures on Green Mountain this morning hovered in the "low twenties" and four inches of new snow have fallen. The road is in good condition but chains are still mandatory. Tows will be operating from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday.

At Forbidden Plateau, the temperature was 14 degrees and the skies were clear. All trails are packed and the annual MOLSTAR race is scheduled for Saturday.

Other Pacific Northwest reports:

MT. SEYMOUR: 104-inch total.
HEMLOCK VALLEY: 150-inch total.
GROUSE MOUNTAIN: Overcast, 19 degrees, no new snow, 115-inch total.
MT. BAKER: 168-inch total.
SNOQUALMIE PASS: Overcast, 22 degrees, two inches new snow, 128-inch total.
STEVENS PASS: Overcast, 10 degrees, one inch new snow, 117-inch total.
MT. PILCHUK: Snowing lightly, 18 degrees, three inches new snow, 130-inch total.

Grandmother Started It All

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Indirectly, Sandy Moore, 15, of Toronto owes his second-place standing in the junior men's competition of the Canadian figure-skating championships to his grandmother.

"She thought my legs were bending when I was five years old so she figured skating might straighten them out," Moore said Wednesday after the compulsory figures which account for 50 per cent of the junior men's competition.

"Since then I've been skating for nine years, the last six in competition."

Skip Groff of Vancouver held a slight lead over Moore after Wednesday's compulsory figures while Lee Armstrong of Chatham, Ont., holder of last year's novice men's title, was third. Former Victorian Kevin Cottam of North Vancouver and Roger Uemae of Toronto followed Armstrong.

Free skating, which accounts for the remaining 50 per cent of the junior men's competition, will be held Friday night.

Shauna McCann and Bill Marchyshyn of Victoria finished seventh in the event while Debra Robertson and Greg Ladret of Vancouver were the highest-ranked B.C. couple at third.

In the two other final events Wednesday, the brother and sister team of Nicole and Pierre Nadeau of Montreal took the novice dance title ahead of Suzanne Lamoureux and Paul Whiston of Windsor, Ont., and Mary Perry and Allan Coombe of North Vancouver.

Judy Bowden of Toronto edged out Kim Alletson of Ottawa for the novice women's championship. Patricia Woods of Coquitlam was third.

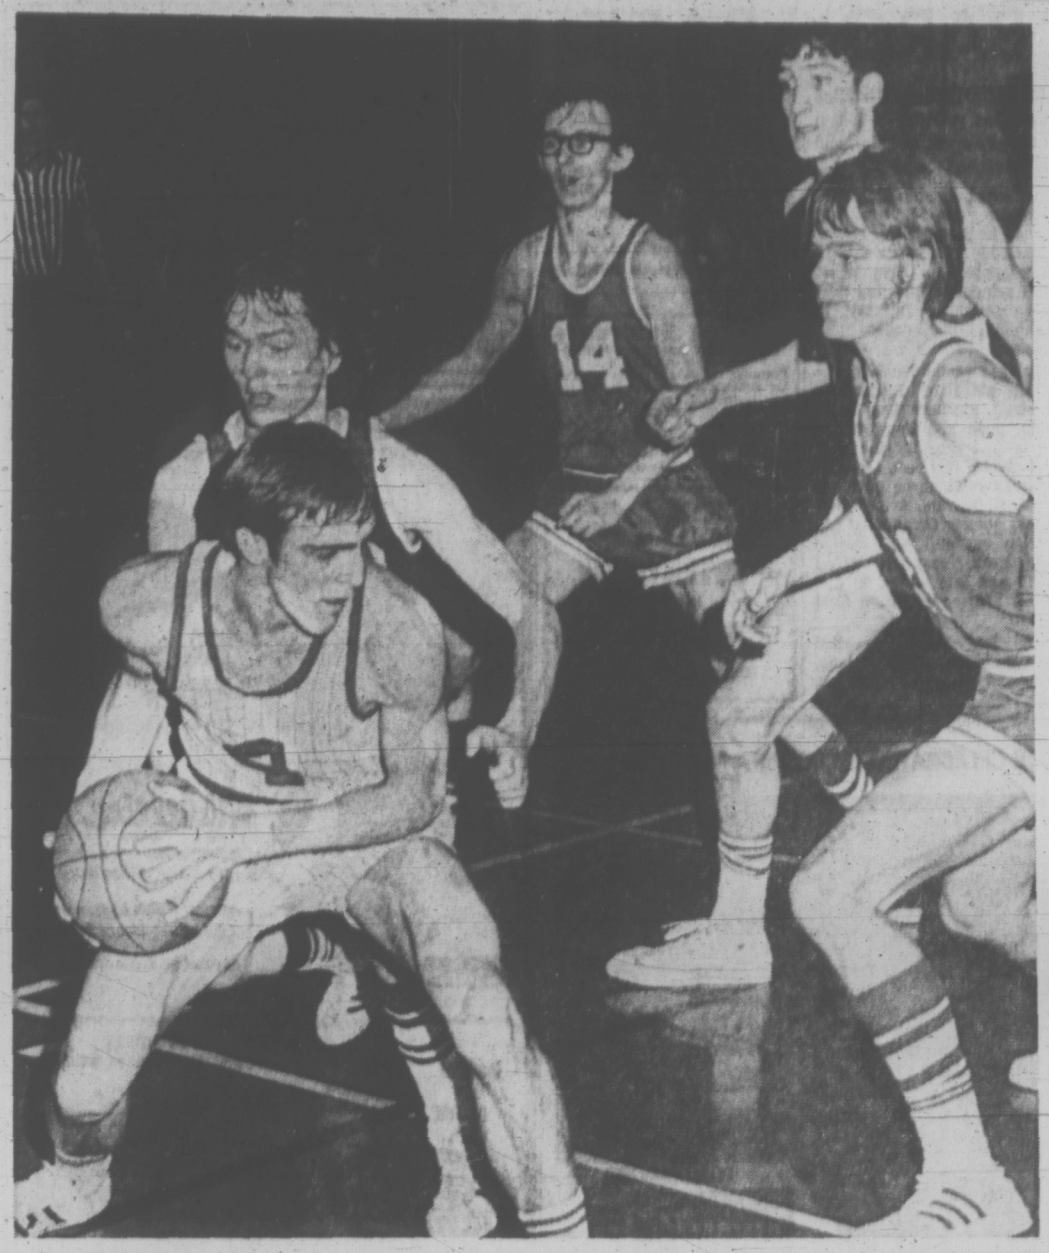
Oak Bay Defeats Belmont In Battle for League Lead



LOOKING FOR PLACE TO GO is Belmont's Jim Kupiak (4), who is hemmed in by Oak Bay rivals during high school basketball battle Wednesday night at Belmont. Oak Bay finished with 50-46 victory in clash between previously-unbeaten clubs.

Wednesday night, in overtime, it paid off for sole possession of first place as the Bays shaded Belmont Braves 50-46 in a Victoria Senior High School Boys' League game before 500 screaming fans at Belmont.

The game, a duel between the two undefeated teams of the eight-team circuit, had all the atmosphere of a tense playoff battle and perhaps the Oak Bay tradition in former playoffs gave the Bay an edge, over the nervous Belmont squad.

That appeared probable as the overtime began. With the teams deadlocked at 44-44, the cool Bays calmly walked to the foul line and sank four successive shots.

Mark Campbell, who missed a shot in the dying seconds, regained his composure early in the overtime to swish two free throws in a row to give the Bays a lift.

The psyched Bays stopped Belmont cold until the dying seconds when Jack Munch scored a basket. In between, Chris Trumpy increased the lead to 48-44 from the floor and Mark Anderson, who hit for 10 points in regulation time, gave himself an even dozen sinking two more foul shots.

In all, the Bays were an accurate 10 for 14 on free throws while the Braves were only 8 for 21.

Dave Anderson paced the Bays, hooping 14 points while Grant Boland contributed 11. Lanky Lee Edmondson, a six-foot-six-inch centre, replied with 14 points for the Braves and John Hunter added 12.

Belmont Girls Win

Oak Bay senior girls' basketball team lost sole possession of the lead in the Victoria High School League Wednesday afternoon.

Belmont tripped the Bay girls 23-20 at Belmont to grab a piece of first place with Oak Bay, which held a two-point edge before game time. Belmont, however, has the upper hand playing one less game than its foe.

Carolyn Sanders topped Belmont's scoring list sinking eight points and Cathy Auburn contributed six to an attack that peeked in the second half after Belmont trailed 11-9 at the half.

Margaret Mainwaring dropped in 14 points for Oak Bay.

In the only other game played, Mt. Douglas got double figures from four players to rout Claremont 63-33 at Douglas.

Mairi Anne Longmore struck for 16 points, Jill Smith chipped in 15, Nancy Griffin slipped in 12 and Ronni Hind added 11.

Badminton Tourney Set

About 120 players are expected to take part in the three-day annual Victoria and District junior badminton championships beginning Friday night at the Racquet Club.

Competition will be in four age brackets — under 13, under-15, under-17 and under-19 — in boys and girls singles as well as mixed doubles. Consolation rounds will be played in all events for first-round losers.

Action begins at 7 p.m. Friday, resumes at 9 a.m. Saturday and concludes with finals starting at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The scale sampling program initiated last year by the Nanaimo Fish and Game Club and supported by the Vancouver Island chapter of the Steelhead Society will continue again this year. The program aimed at gathering information to better understand Island steelhead produced a return of 165 scale samples from 22 rivers during the 1969-70 season.

This year, rather than repeat information already gathered from last year's program, the two groups are asking anglers to collect scale samples from only two rivers. These two rivers the Nanaimo and the Oyster — have been chosen because of their recreational position on the Island and because of various environmental problems.

At least 300 scale samples are required from each river if an adequate in-depth analysis is to be completed. This many representative samples will require considerable co-operation from steelhead anglers. The information gathered however, will prove invaluable for numerous reasons, including setting adequate habitat and rearing standards for steelhead.

The Nanaimo and Oyster ranked second and seventh, respectively, in the total angler catch during the 1969-70 season. It is interesting to note the top ten rivers on Vancouver Island during the 1969-70 season. In order of total number of fish caught, they were: Gold — 947 steelhead; Nanaimo — 910; Cowichan — 898; Englishmans — 809; Stamp — 578; Little Qualicum — 449; Oyster — 408; Campbell — 392, San Juan — 380; Buntledge — 360.

Anglers successful on the Nanaimo and the Oyster are asked to send their scale samples to either the Nanaimo Fish and Game Club, Box 211, Nanaimo, B.C., or to the Steelhead Society at 1841 Robb Ave., Comox, B.C.

Scales can be easily scraped from the fish. Use a knife to scrape against the scales and then scrape back to collect those free. About thrity scales are required from each fish for an accurate reading. Deposit the number collected in an envelope and record the following information on the envelope: species, river, date, sex, length (from tip of nose to fork of tail), weight, lure, name and address of angler. (Collection envelopes are available from the Nanaimo club or the Steelhead Society.)

Note, it is important that only scales be collected from back of the dorsal fin and at least three scale rows above the lateral line.

Information from the samples collected from the 1969-70 angler catch was recorded by D. W. Narver and F. C. Withler in a paper, "Age and Size of Steelhead Trout in Angler's Catches from Vancouver Island Streams." The various findings were summarized to reveal the following:

"The length-weight relationship for uncleaned Vancouver Island steelhead showed that on the average a 26-inch steelhead weighed about 6½ lbs, a 28-inch fish weighed about 8½ lbs., a 30-inch fish about 10 lbs., a 32-inch fish about 12 lbs., and a 34-inch fish about 14 lbs.

Steelhead smolts in Vancouver Island streams range well into the size that might be taken by trout fishermen. (Minimum size limit is eight inches.) These observations suggest that the larger, legal-size seaward migrants most likely to be kept by trout fishermen are also those having the greatest likelihood of returning as adults two or three years later.

The male to female ratio among first-time spawners in the sample was about one male to two females.

Sixteen per cent of the steelhead reported were repeat spawners. The ratio for these fish showed one male for 5.5 females.

Most fish had migrated to sea after two winters in the river (69 per cent) while most of the remainder had migrated after three winters (29 per cent).

The most common age of first-time spawners in the sample was five years (48 per cent).

Swimming Meet

Approximately 500 competitors from 15 clubs will vie for honors in the Victoria Olympians-Juan de Fuca Cohoes invitational swim meet at the weekend in the new Crystal Pool.

In addition to the two Greater Victoria co-hosts, clubs entering swimmers in the "B" and "C" class meet are Canadian Dolphins, Crystal Pool Swim Club, Hollyburn Country Club, Jewish Community Centre, Killarney Swim Club and Vancouver Amateur Swim Club, all from the Greater Vancouver area; Burnaby Tyee, Renfrew Swim Club (Burnaby), Tsawwassen Swim Club, Port Angeles Swim Club, Port Alberni Aquatic Club and New Westminster Y-Kings.

Races for contestants up to 12 years of age will be held from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturday and older swimmers will compete from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

All events will consist of timed heats without finals.

Admission charges each day are 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for students.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Setting pace for fourth time in women's fivepin division of Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition is Janet Broste, who rolled 868 total in 12th week of ninth annual contest. Mrs. Broste earned weekly award as she racked up scores of 308, 303 and 257 in Monday Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Globe Actors Named

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Gene Hackman, Jack Nicholson and George C. Scott were among those nominated Wednesday by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for Golden Globe awards.

Also in the running for the best dramatic actor of 1971 at the Feb. 6 awards are Peter Finch and Malcolm McDowell. Dyan Cannon, Jane Fonda, Glenda Jackson, Vanessa Redgrave and Jessica Walter were nominated for best dramatic actress.

Nominated for best drama were A Clockwork Orange, The French Connection, The Last Picture Show, Mary Queen of Scots and the Summer of '42.

Movies in the musical-comedy category are The Boyfriend, Fiddler on the Roof, Kotch and A New Leaf. Actor nominations in this class are Bud Cort, Dean Jones, Walter Mathau and Gene Wilder. Actresses nominated in musical comedy are Sandy Duncan, Ruth Gordon, Angela Lansbury, Elaine May and Twiggy.

Shaw Festival Will Include 7-Week Tour

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Two plays by George Bernard Shaw, a classic American comedy and a seven-week tour involving visits to both the Canadian and United States capitals are planned for the Shaw Festival 1972 drama season.

Shaw's Getting Married will open July 16 and his Misalliance July 19. They will alternate in repertory until Sept. 3.

Misalliance, directed by festival artistic director Paxton Whitehead, will become the first Canadian production to appear at Washington's John F. Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts June 26-July 8. It opens May 22 for two weeks at Ottawa's National Arts Centre.

The Kaufman-Ferber comedy The Royal Family will open the Shaw Festival season June 12.

BARON BACK

BERLIN (AP) — The Red Baron has returned to action in the city of his acclaim, and the reception is mixed.

A United Artsits film, Von Richtofen and Brown, has opened in West Berlin. It was panned by critics, but a company spokesman says ticket sales are good, reflecting Berlin's continued interest in Richtofen, his deeds and times.

As fate would have it, the burial place of Rittmeister Manfred Freiherr von Richtofen, dead and immortal at 25, is just short of the wall that divides this once imperial capital for which he gave his life April 21, 1918. Armed Germans, under Communist direction but still in Prussian field grey, pass on patrol early and late within 10 feet of his grave just inside East Berlin.

The Red Baron, so-called because of his all-red triplane, is played by John Philip Law, but with little revelation of what made the leading ace of the First World War tick inside.

Capt. Roy Brown, the Canadian from Carleton Place, Ont., who was credited with downing Richtofen as the baron hunted an 81st victim at tree-top level, is acted by Don Stroud.

Just Another Game Only One in World

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bob Griese stared coldly and swore he's approaching Sunday's Super Bowl as "just another game . . . but one that happens to be the only game in the world."

"Pressure builds if you allow it to build," he said. "It does hit home when you realize Dallas and Miami are the only survivors in a single-elimination tournament."

FOOTBALL BRAIN

The fifth-year pro from Purdue is a rare introverted quarterback without the flash of a Joe Namath or a Roman Gabriel and minus the reputation for a magic arm in the category of John Brodie, Sonny Jurgenson or John Unitas.

"Bob has a magnificent football brain," says Don Shula, coach of the American Conference champions. "He is second to none . . . in the huddle or at the line of scrimmage."

DRIVES HIMSELF

Griese drives himself in the academics of the game. He never tires of watching such formidable opponents as Dallas's Bob Lilly, Mel Renfro, Cornell Green and Lee Roy Jordan.

"I spend almost every waking hour watching Cowboy films and studying their habits," Griese said.

"Like any great team, Dallas does not allow itself to fall into too much of a pattern. It becomes a game of patience and, yes, a game of guessing right."

NOTED FOR PATIENCE

"Griese is famed for patience.

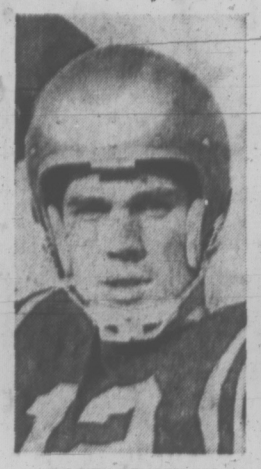
"All I'm concerned with is hitting the third-and-nine pass . . . with driving for a touchdown or a field goal," he said. "If a team like Dallas stops you, that's fine . . . they didn't get to the Super Bowl by letting other people score."

Then, there's his philosophy on playing catch-up football. "You never allow yourself to panic. You can't quarterback a team with the idea that you're going to score 20 points in one march . . . its seven at a time, at best. You must stick with the game plan."

Griese's unexcited, calculated approach rubs off on the other 39 Dolphins.

"We're loose, but none of that rah-rah stuff," he said. "There's no false chatter and phoney yelling. It's mostly self-preparation, every man getting himself ready in his own way."

Must Win, Says Roger



ROGER STAUBACH
. . . first regular season

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — To Roger Staubach, the Super Bowl means more than a challenge to prove that Dallas Cowboys can win the big ones — his own personal stake is an imposing one.

"I must win," he said solemnly today. "I must prove myself as a passer."

The 6-foot-3, 197-pound former Heisman Trophy winner from the Naval Academy is conscious that at 29 he concedes an edge in experience to his rival in next Sunday's championship game, 26-year-old Bob Griese of Miami Dolphins.

CONTROLS TEAM

"Griese is a more complete quarterback than I," he said during a practice break at the New Orleans Saints' workout field. "He has control of his team. I don't."

Griese is a five-year veteran out of Purdue. This is the first regular season of play — virtually the rookie year — for Staubach, who spent four years in navy service, including a year in Vietnam, before returning to civilian life and pro football in 1969.

Whereas Griese is permitted by coach Don Shula to call almost the entire game, Staubach is merely the feeder and the architect for Dallas plays, shuttled by messenger from the bench on every down.

"When I feel my quarterback is experienced enough, I'll let him call the plays," says Dallas coach Tom Landry.

Staubach is not offended so much by this lack of confidence as by the tag that has been plastered on him as "the scrambling quarterback."

"I don't like it that most people consider me primarily a runner instead of a passer," he said.

"I can pass as well as anybody. My job now is to prove it."

During the past season, Staubach rushed the ball 41 times for 343 yards and an 8.4 average with two touchdowns. He completed 126 of 211 passes for 1,882 yards and 15 touchdowns.

He had only four interceptions.

Since he inherited the No. 1 Dallas job from Craig Morton, the Cowboys have won nine straight.

By comparison Griese has carried the ball 26 times for 82 yards — a 3.2 average — but completed 145 of 263 passes for 2,089 yards and 19 touchdowns.

Joe Tosses Barbs at Ali

"He's getting old," Frazier said of Ali who will be 30 next Monday. "He's becoming an old fool."

Daniels, an unranked and little-known fighter who is a former Southern Methodist University football player, will be the man after Frazier's world heavyweight title Saturday night. But it was Ali that sports writers, most of them here for the Super Bowl football game Sunday, wanted most to talk about.

And Frazier, obviously rankled by Ali's public claims that he really beat Frazier last March, was willing to oblige.

On the subject of a rematch, which Ali has said he wants so he can avenge his only defeat and retire, Frazier said:

"I don't have to fight him again. I feel Clay (Ali's also known as Cassius Clay) is gonna' have to respect more than he has. Because I don't need him."

The champion also knocked Ali's physical condition. "He's been fat the last few fights (220 pounds-plus). "I'm 209 now and will go into the ring about 207. I'm ready."

While Frazier has been overshadowed by the Super Bowl between Dallas and Miami, Daniels has practically been lost.

It is Frazier who has been attracting the hard-core fight fans and the curious to workouts in the penthouse—actually a storeroom—on the roof of a hotel in the French Quarter.

Guidelines Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paul Hellyer, leader of the Action Canada Party, said Wednesday mandatory guidelines for labor and management are essential to achieve full employment and combat inflation.

However, the former Liberal cabinet minister told the truck loggers association convention that controls would be necessary only where some form of monopoly exists.

'Incompetent'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Senator Edward Lawson said Wednesday the British Columbia Mediation Commission is "inefficient, incompetent and non-functioning."

Sen. Lawson, in a speech to the Men's Canadian Club, said if the provincial government was serious in its call for efficiency and cost-cutting, it would abolish the commission.

Growers Want Fence

OSOYOOS (CP) — Orchardists in this southern Okanagan Valley community have asked the provincial government to supply an estimated $7,000 worth of fencing materials to keep deer away from their fruit trees.

Game officials here say about 32 deer have been shot and another six or so wounded in the past two weeks by orchardists protecting their trees.

Orchardists have been given special licences since 1967 to shoot the deer on their own property, but the licences were revoked Sunday after unauthorized persons began deer hunting.

Rights 'Eroded'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Government control over land usage is eroding the rights of land owners, Jack E. Anderson, a member of the board of management of the Corporation of Land Surveyors of British Columbia, said Wednesday.

Anderson, speaking at the annual meeting of land surveyors, said increasing abridgement of property rights is outright theft in the pretence of serving what some administrator thinks is the public interest.

Anderson said curtailment of the right to manage property could take many forms, such as zoning, arbitrary classification of lands such as turning some property into a "green belt", or by forcing a subdivision owner to give up land for roads, schools or rights of way.

8,500 Hours Lost

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. told Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson in British Columbia Supreme Court Wednesday that illegal work stoppages by falling and bucking crews have cost at least 8,5000 hours of lost time at the company's Franklin River Logging operation on Vancouver Island.

The company has taken court action against 85 members of the International Woodworkers of America at Franklin River, alleging that the work stoppages amount to a "concerted effort" by the fallers and buckers to cause a work slowdown at the operation and thus force MacMillan Bloedel to reopen talks on a labor contract now in effect.

$4,000 Less Per Unit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Architect L. J. E. Genner of Vancouver said Wednesday that governments have demonstrated they cannot carry out public housing projects as economically as private developers.

Genner said the Champlain Heights public housing project in south Vancouver has become so expensive it shouldn't be built. He said he is building a limited divided housing project in the same area for $4,000 less per unit than the government project.

Williston Threat

The threat was contained in a letter from Williston dated Dec. 22 and made public at a special meeting of council.

Mayor Louis Maglio said a report is expected sometime next week from the city's consulting electrical engineers on the feasibility of the city constructing a thermal generating plant.

Appeal Seeks Hiking Moms

An appeal for volunteers to take part in a door-to-door Kinsmen Mothers' March scheduled for Feb. 1, was made Wednesday by Ron Seward, spokesman for the club.

Mothers willing to help out are asked to telephone 477-8305.

'Elbow Room' Shortage Brings Troops to Suffield

MEDICINE HAT, Alta. (CP) — About 3,000 British troops will train at the Suffield research station this year under an agreement with the federal government, Col. T. A. Gibson said this week.

Col. Gibson, head of the British army training unit, told a news conference an advance group is scheduled to arrive May 22 to prepare for the arrival of the first of five battle groups of 600 men each June 12.

"The 1,000 square miles at Suffield will permit the firing of any British weapon," said Col. Gibson.

'Whim' Robbery

SASKATOON (CP) — Peter Chief, 30, of Selkirk, Man., was sentenced Wednesday to five years in penitentiary when he pleaded guilty in magistrate's court to theft of $5,754.

Chief was originally charged with armed robbery after a branch of the Bank of Montreal was held up last July 19. But the charge was reduced for lack of evidence when a preliminary hearing failed to determine whether a weapon or imitation weapon was involved.

Defence counsel told the court that on a whim, Chief walked into the bank, wrote the word "holdup" on a bank slip and presented it to a teller with one hand while keeping the other inside his shirt.

Mill Will Rise

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — A feed mill which was destroyed by an explosion and fire last December will be rebuilt, says Gordon Moss, manager of United Feeds Ltd. in Calgary.

He said today in a news release that construction will start on the United Feeds mill as soon as weather conditions are favorable.

One man was killed and three injured in the Dec. 5 $500,000 explosion.

Stanfield, Wallace To Huddle Jan. 25

Robert Stanfield, leader of the national Progressive Conservative Party, will visit Victoria on Jan. 25 to discuss reorganization of the B.C. party with Dr. Scott Wallace and provincial leader Derril Warren.

Wallace, who as MLA for Oak Bay quit the Social Credit Party last year to become an independent, Monday announced he had joined the Tories to become the party's first member in the legislature in 17 years.

Wallace Wednesday said he and Warren will draw on Stanfield's "tremendous" organizational experience towards immediate steps to revitalize the Tories as a party to be reckoned with in B.C.

"We can't revitalize without reorganizing first," he said. "And Warren and I are a couple of neophytes as far as political organization goes."

Warren, a Vancouver lawyer, last year defeated John de Wolf as B.C. leader. Wallace at first had rejected any idea of joining the Tories because of de Wolf's leadership.

Wallace said he will discuss "anything he (Stanfield) wants to in the political realm" and work for the party "without any reservations" now that he has ironed out his previous indecision.

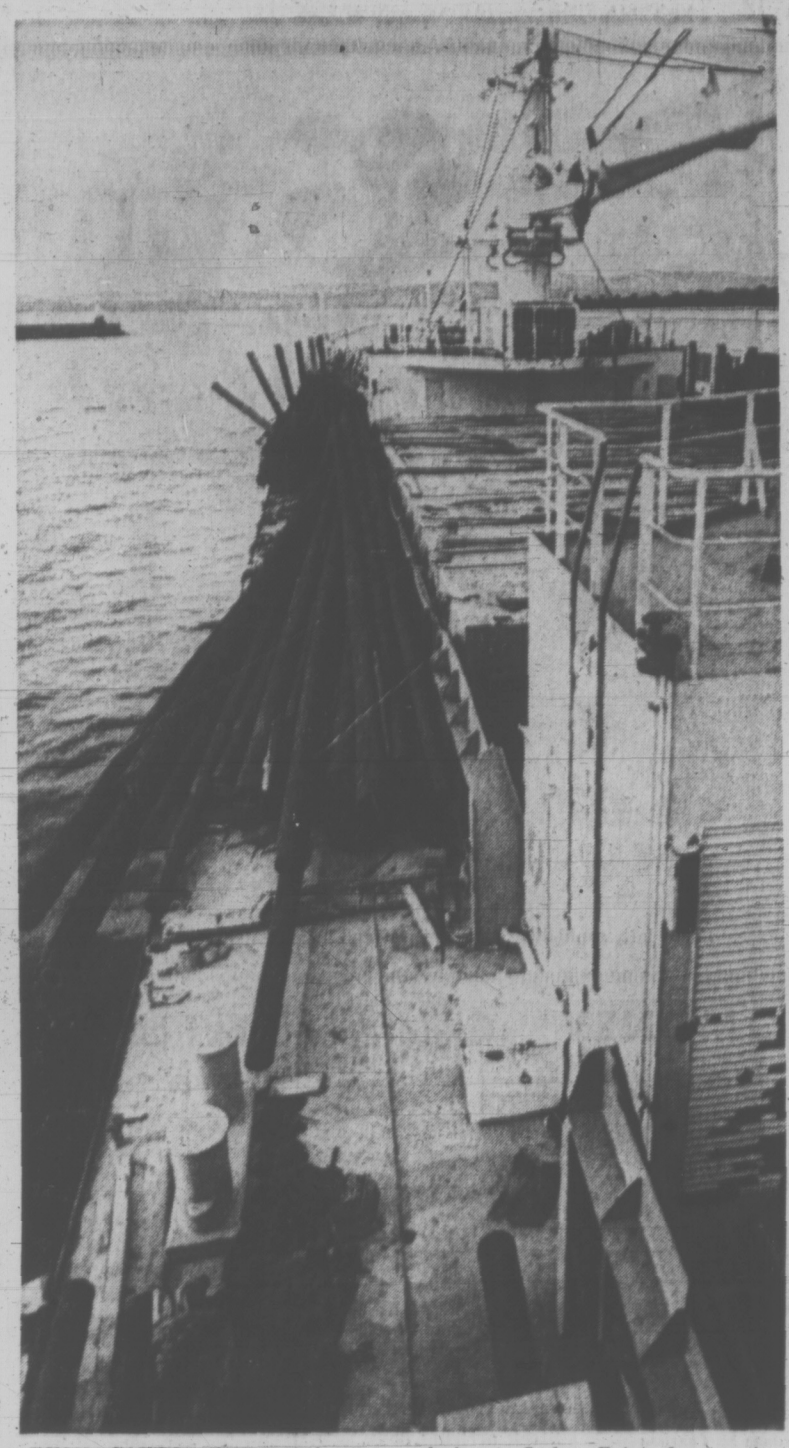
"I had talked to him about my indecision at that time," Wallace said.

Stanfield, in a three-day visit to B.C., will address the Vancouver Board of Trade Jan. 24, and, after visiting Victoria, will attend a federal Conservative nominating meeting for Burnaby - Richmond on Jan. 26.



DECK CARGO of creosoted piles aboard German freighter Cap Carmel took a battering in rough weather, forcing 5,025-ton vessel to turn about near Cape Flattery and dock at Ogden Point for repairs Wednesday. She had sailed from New Westminster for Panama area Tuesday and will be delayed three or four days for repairs.

Rigid, Two-Nation Control Asked on Coastal Shipping

Victoria MP David Groos said today he has written Prime Minister Trudeau urging establishment of an international commission to rigidly control shipping on the west coast.

Victoria is apparently about to become an outpost alongside a vast oil tanker route between Alaska and a refinery at Cherry Point in Washington, said Groos. An international agency similar to the one operating the St. Lawrence Seaway is needed immediately.

He said an international commission for the west coast should have power to control shipping from Alaska to San Francisco, including authority to seize and destroy if necessary ships which are obviously endangering the Canadian or American coast.

The British have now written into their statutes this sort of authority, he said.

Besides urging quick action on establishing a joint commission, Groos detailed in today's letter to Trudeau what powers he thinks the commission should have and what steps it should take.

These include:

● A jurisdiction including not only the Strait of Juan de Fuca and Gulf of Georgia but rules covering ships headed for these waters from Alaska to San Francisco.

● Quality standards for ships which will be entering waters under the commission's jurisdiction.

"In other words, ships will have to have certain safeguards before they will be allowed in . . ."

● An elaborate system of navigational aids, including long-range blind navigation and short-range equipment, light and sound signals and escort vessels for particularly critical cargos.

"There will have to be a beefed-up pilotage organization which to my mind would require them to have a pilot aboard for the whole time they're in waters under the commission's jurisdiction."

Americans Deceptive

Groos said a system of reporting procedures for incoming marine traffic would be needed, one which advised on what cargoes were being carried, destinations and safeguards.

● There is a need for "harbors of refuge," points along the coast to aid ships damaged or in other difficulties.

"We just cannot have ships leaking oil travelling up and down our straits."

● A much more sophisticated rescue and aid service for ships in trouble, one which could incidentally strengthen the present air-sea rescue operation for small boats in distress.

● The commission would have to establish traffic channels for ships moving along the coast with dangerous cargoes and this would mean a central routing control apparatus somewhere on the Canadian or American west coast.

Groos said he had discussed informally the idea of a international commission with individual members of the U.S. congressional maritime committee.

"They have been very receptive to the idea. I don't think we'll find any difficulty."

He suggested conservationists should be represented on the international agency.

Groos said he had deliberately refrained from making his formal application to Trudeau before now so he would not prejudice the court battle being waged against the tanker route by his fellow MP David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich) and the Canadian Wildlife Federation.

Anderson and the CWF are seeking an injunction to delay the proposed pipeline from Alaska's north slope oil fields to the port of Valdez. Their case is scheduled to go before a court in Washington, D.C., Friday.

QUORUM RULE STANDS

The Victoria Labor Council will have to operate under stringent new quorum regulations, secretary Larry Ryan said today.

The new rule, imposed by the Canadian Labor Congress on all local labor councils in the country, led to fears being expressed here last month that not many meetings will be held because the quorum won't be met.

The old quorum in Victoria was 20 delegates from six unions. The new quorum is 50 delegates from 18 unions. Attendance generally has been between 25 and 40 delegates from 20 to 25 unions.

"We are definitely stuck with the new quorum regulation, no ifs and buts," said Ryan.

"This new regulation may be a spur to a better response from unions and might urge them to come out. But the law has been laid down and they are not going to have any constitutional variations."

The labor council has credentials for 63 regular delegates and 48 alternates, sufficient to meet the new regulation if there is a good turnout.

Crime Rate Cause? Choose a Theory

Different theories were put forward today to explain the high crime rate in British Columbia.

Some of the explanations: tourism, drugs, young people, better reporting of offences, transients and the permissive society.

Figures released Wednesday by Statistics Canada showed B.C. had the highest rates in the country for murder, manslaughter, rape, breaking and entering, theft over $50 and petty theft in 1970.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said B.C. shows the highest crime rate because it is the best at reporting offences.

The RCMP is responsible for most of the province's policing and this means that a high standard of reporting offences is maintained, he said.

"This reflects to the credit of police. But it points up we do have a problem."

He called for "top priority" for law enforcement from government and the public, urging support for the police including addition to their numbers.

★ ★ ★

Peterson said the statistics on crime rates are misleading because of differences in reporting of offences.

"Where would you sooner walk at night — in Edmonton which has the highest crime rate or in Montreal and Quebec City which are supposed to have the lowest," he asked.

He also said statistics for the first nine months of 1971 show a levelling off from the peaks of 1970 in many categories of offences.

Deputy-Victoria police chief Ray Maitland said the province's climate attracts transients and where these are young people dabbling in drugs "they're going to do things to support their habit."

A lot of crime cases involve out-of-town people, he said. Another factor was permissiveness in dealing with juveniles involved in crime.

Assistant RCMP commissioner G. C. Cunningham said the high rate of tourism might be a contributing factor.

Tisdalle 'Expects' Answers

John Tisdalle, MLA for Saanich and the Islands, said today he will attend a University of Victoria board of governors' meeting Monday to find out why it gave president Bruce Partridge an $80,000 terminal settlement.

Tisdalle made arrangements to attend the meeting after he was asked this week by the Saanich school board to investigate the reasons behind such a large settlement.

"I expect to get some answers," Tisdalle said.

Asked whether he had any views on the matter, the Social Credit MLA replied: "It would be rather unfair for me to make observations on something that has yet to be considered."

Formal Order, Please, Or the Slash Goes On

The president of a tree-clearing firm said work will continue today on the 150-acre Lineham property on Land's End Road until a stop-work order in writing is issued by the municipality of North Saanich.

Ron Smith, president of Charles A. Cowie Tree Service Ltd., said he was given a verbal stop-work order Tuesday afternoon by a municipal official and told a written order would be forthcoming.

'JOB TO DO'

"But there has been nothing further . . . and I have a job to do," Smith said.

North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis said that although no written stop-work order had been issued, logging activities were suspended "by mutual consent."

Smith said today he would honor only a written order. His firm was blocked from slashing and burning timber on an adjacent property owned by the Bains Development Company Ltd., on Jan. 4 via a posted stop-work order from the municipality.

Harold Lineham, 1150 Richardson, owner of the property, said he regards such orders as discriminatory.

"It is not their (the municipality's) business to stop tree-clearing," he said.

Lineham eventually plans to subdivide the land.

$5,000 DAMAGE IN SAILBOAT FIRE

Sidney firemen extinguished a blaze which caused about $5,000 damage to a 45-foot sailboat in Tsehum harbor early Wednesday morning.

RCMP say they have not yet been able to contact Mac Como, owner of the vessel, who is at sea in another boat.

Chief Hugh Loney said eight men put the fire out in about an hour with the aid of a portable pump.

Cause of the blaze has not been established.

The 'Nowhere Man' Is Someplace Now

"Are you content to let other people run your life?" Judge William Ostler asked Donald F. Magee, 21, of no fixed address.

He said he was.

He pleaded guilty to ordering a $4.90 meal at the Strathcona Hotel Wednesday and not paying for it.

He wrote on the back of the bill "Sorry, no money." He told police he wanted to be arrested.

The accused told Ostler he had left his home in Montreal in November by bus and arrived in Vancouver several days later. He arrived in Victoria Tuesday.

He said he ordered the food because he was hungry and had no place to stay.

"You don't want to stay in jail?" Ostler said, but Magee said he did.

The judge asked if he was travelling around the country.

"Nowhere, really," Magee said of his destination.

Ostler said he had never met such a negative man.

The judge sentenced the accused to a nominal one day in jail, adding it was "too absurd" to send the man to prison for such an offence.

For Wallace, a Skirl if Not a Fanfare

LET US CAST A NOSTALgic over-the-shoulder glance at an era when each election brought its quota of Conservatives to British Columbia's legislative flock. They spoke in debate, chaffered in caucus with others of their kind, and voted on the bills. In those pre-coalition years, there was nothing to indicate that the House would one day number the sober-feathered Tory among its extinct species.

Perhaps the end began even before 1952 — the year when coalition blew up with an echoing bang, and party chief Herbert Anscomb lost his Oak Bay seat to a Liberal. In any case, history records that B.C.'s last lone Tory MLA ended it all by declaring himself an Independent during the 1955 session.

Now, 17 years later, the wheel has gone full circle. Before this month is over, the topless plaster ladies of the Legislative Chamber will gaze down on another Conservative.

True, Dr. Scott Wallace will rate a 'P.C.' rather than the oldtime Tory 'C' after his name, and he will not sit as a Progressive Conservative by process of election. However, if the return of a long-absent party to the House doesn't qualify for a flourish of trumpets, at least it calls for a skirl of bagpipes.

I wish tough and trenchant Dr. Wallace well in his new role. He can be expected to stand firm against the assaults of a government party that seems doomed by fate to have traditionally old-line Oak Bay elude its grasp.

We might also consider this ironic circumstance.

It was a Conservative who in 1951 crossed the floor of the House to prepare the way for Social Credit. Now, in a switch only less dramatic, a disenchanted Social Credit member proposes to sit as a Progressive Conservative.

One swallow doesn't make a summer — but this parallel in reverse deserves to be pondered by anyone who takes stock in omens!

★

Not all of the news is new, and one story that broke last weekend has been repeated in outline since man first ventured to do business in great waters.

Add to the roster of lost ships the Dona Anita, bound with a cargo of Canadian potash for Japan, and overwhelmed in a gale off our coast.

That too is an old, sad story many times repeated in all oceans. And although in this swift-paced century we have become hardened to the new and the strange, the sinking with all hands of a ship at sea can still move us.

Man who has launched on the conquest of space has yet to subdue the element that washes his earthly shores. The loss of the Dona Anita provides a tragic reminder of that fact.

As one who pre-made and pre-broke his New Year's resolution to avoid putting off chores, I am dealt with in the kindest of terms by Mrs. T. Hutchinson of 1010 Hampshire Road.

"When I was a little girl," Mrs. Hutchinson writes, "I was always going to do something 'tomorrow', so one day my mother bought a plaque with the following poem:

"'I'll do it tomorrow', 'tis easy to say,
But it spells certain failure, so do it today
For moments fly fast, and today soon will be
Enwrapt in the folds of eternity.

"'I'll do it tomorrow', nay brother, pray pause.
Take heed of the danger that lurks in that clause.
For barques have gone down in the whirlpool of sorrow
That were wrecked on the reef of 'I'll do it tomorrow'."

A worthy precept, and one that I hope will be taken to heart by any reader who is inclined to procrastinate.

Not by me, though! As Mrs. Hutchinson observes to this putter-off with uncomfortable insight, "I'm sure it's too late for these words to do you any good."

So much for this day, and off now with the firm intention of letting tomorrow take care of itself!

Girls for Brentwood!

Brentwood College School will accept girl students into Grades 11 and 12 next September, headmaster David Mackenzie confirmed today.

Brentwood has been a boys school since its formation in 1923.

The change, which will be detailed at a news conference Monday, is the result of an extensive survey of similar schools, Mackenzie said.

He said one of the main reasons for beginning a co-educational program is a belief that academic competition will be improved. Enrolment will remain at 250 students and a "limited number" of girl students will be accepted.

What Type Of Woman Are You?

Women can be divided into six distinct categories, says a man who has spent the last few years doing research on their changing attitudes toward fashions.

Stig B. Hedqvist, a marketing communications executive, says he has found that when it comes to clothes each type has a different marketing need.

The six Toronto models shown here represent Mr. Hedqvist's ideas of how each category looks and dresses. Read the following descriptions and try to match them to your personality.

A. Sophisticated/Elegant: Knows what she wants, is well-educated and has taste. Wants to be admired and respected by men, is not interested in working herself but in her partner's work.

B. Romantic/Affectionate: Sensitive, emotional, needs someone to lean on, loves harmony and beauty, is tenderhearted, idealistic, trusting and easy to impress.

C. Progressive/Different: Has her own thoughts about things, usually radical. Does not like to conform, is provocative and demonstrative.

D. Natural/Straightforward: Unaffected, spontaneous, realistic, reliable, tolerant of men, attaches importance to having a career, sociable, fits easily into almost all company.

E. Feminine/Vivacious: Uncomplicated, full of tenderness, consciously erotic, sees man as a true lover and husband. Likes clothes that reveal her physical advantages.

F. Independent/Dynamic: Active, independent, broad-minded, feels a career is important, enjoys discussions and is well-informed. Favors comfortable, functional clothes of good quality, including pantsuits, tailored suits, jackets.

Children's Books New

Dr. Robert E. Switzer, director of the Children's Hospital at the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kan., and his associate director, Dr. J. Cotter Hirschbert, have put together a series of creative, problem-solving books written for children and adults.

The titles: Sometimes I Get Angry, My Friend the Baby Sitter, Sometimes I'm Afraid, and Look at Me Now. All are designed as shared problem-solving experiences. Each begins with explanatory "Notes to Parents," (telling how parents should be sensitive to their child's emotional patterns and problems, how they can cope, aid and mend early anxieties by simple soothing communication.

'Other Woman' On Way Out

● What will marriage be like in the year 2000? Sociologists are now looking into the question and have already predicted changes including the two-tier marriage, trial marriage, and renewable marriage contracts. Following is the second of three articles that look at married life in the future.

By STELLA BRUCE
Special to the Times

NEW YORK (WNS) — The eternal triangle—husband, wife and some shadowy figure in the background — is the cause, according to the latest world figures, of more than 60 per cent of today's marriage break-ups.

And in well over half of these cases, the shadowy figure is . . . a woman.

Today's wives — and their mothers before them — have learned to live with the spectre of "the other woman," either real or imaginary. He's working later at the office . . . is it "another woman"? He's bought some after-shave. Hmm . . does that mean he's got "somebody else . . ."

But the way things are shaping up, we might be the last generation to get so steamed up about somebody who in many cases doesn't even exist!

Pensioned Off

For, according to an increasing number of experts, the "other woman" is in the process of being pensioned off. And when marriage moves into the year 2000 she might be nothing more than a quaint memory of the "gay old days" of the '70s.

That doesn't mean, of course, that some men might not go off the rails from time to time, but the furtive philandering which has provided a living for umpteen private detectives could well be on the way out. At least that's the theory.

Marriage 2000, according to such experts as British sociologist Dr. Charles Darkley, will probably be run on very different lines than our own.

And already, he maintains, the trends are leading toward a new code of what has been called "ordered liberty."

Explains Dr. Darkley: "The husbands and wives of 30 years ahead could well see morality as merely a basic love of humanity which dictates that nothing is wrong unless it causes pain or distress to others or injures the family unit."

Some pundits gloomily forecast the end of marriage as we know it by the end of the century, but that's not the trend that the latest social surveys are revealing.

Love Discarded

A leading psychiatrist puts it like this: "Everything points to the fact that by the year 2000 the songwriter's fantasy of romantic love will have been at least partly discarded from modern marriage.

"That means it's possible that the mistress and the prostitute — the traditional guardians of romantic-love — will eventually become redundant, and disappear.

"In its place there will be an exclusive husband-wife relationship of greater intensity and sincerity.

"I can even visualize the day when promiscuity is looked upon sympathetically as a symptom of psychological disturbance."

Other experts agree. "A move away from permissiveness is beginning already," says Jose Merritt, a sociologist who last year conducted a survey into marriage trends involving nearly 2,000 husbands and wives.

"There seems to be some sort of resurgence of spirit among parents who had become confused and lacking in confidence.

"They are now trying to give a new sense of security to their children who, in turn, should pass it on when they themselves have families."

What this means, says Dr. Darkley, is that young parents bringing up children at the turn of the century will probably have marriages which are basically more honest than ours are; they will live in a way which will astonish, and perhaps shock, the older ones among us.

For instance, a Swedish magazine recently headed an article on the future of marriage with a picture of five men carrying one girl over the threshold of their new home.

Is this what we can expect . . .?

Highly unlikely, says Dr. Darkley, although he can forsee kibbutzstyle living with people existing as a group rather than as segregated couples.

And will that mean communal bedrooms? "Perhaps so," says Dr. Darkley guardedly.

Other sociologists believe that traditional types of morality will be replaced by a greater concern for the old, the poor and minority groups.

Children of a year 2000 marriage will probably be marrying even earlier than their parents did - perhaps at 15 or 16, according to some authorities.

Will they be happy marriages? "Probably they will be, within the new context," says Jose Merritt.

"But if they aren't, it's unlikely that people will tolerate unhappy marriages as long as we do. If it's not working out, people will be much more inclined to turn to the divorce courts.

"All indications are that changes in divorce law will continue, to make separation even easier.

Marriage Valued

"But this doesn't necessarily mean that moral standards will fall and everyone will rush around sleeping with everyone else. By 2000 we will probably value marriage far more as an institution than we do today."

Other authorities feel the same. Perhaps the wild days of wife-swapping and wholesale adultery that have been forecast for the next century may not come after all.

"Sex will be sexier, love more loving and violence more vile," forecasts Dr. Desmond Morris, author of "The Naked Ape."

"And that might well serve to bring the family unit closer. Despite the temptations, most people will continue to try to pick the right partner for the right reasons."

New Weapons for Anti-Smokers

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Many anti-smoking clinics today use the fear of dying from lung cancer, heart disease and other long-term, harmful effects of smoking as their major weapon against the habit.

But a Toronto study, reported this month in an American medical journal, suggests that more success would be achieved in getting people to stop smoking permanently by concentrating more on the short-term effects of smoking (such as higher-than-normal carbon monoxide levels in the blood, high heart rate and impaired physical condition).

More Emphasis

There should be more emphasis on the immediate improvements of quitting smoking.

And perhaps anti-smoking programs should fight fire with fire against advertisers by pointing out some of the unfavorable aspects of the personality of smokers (as compared to nonsmokers).

Many of the short-term deleterious effects of smoking are easily measured in clinics, the study points out, and can be used as an immediate positive incentive for a smoker to want to quit.

And, just as important, many of the relatively immediate improvements following the cessation of smoking can provide the former smoker with reason not to start again.

The study of a Toronto smoking withdrawal program is published in the January issue of the Archives of Environmental Health. It stresses the general need of anti-smoking programs to include not only advice on smoking but also on diet and physical activity.

Women Return

This need is underlined in the report by the fact that many of the women who quit smoking had ended up returning to their habit.

The reason for the reversal: a localized (around the knees) and unpopular weight gain (average of almost 15 pounds).

And researchers Andris Rode, Roy Ross and Dr. Roy J. Shephand of the University of Toronto's environmental health department believe the weight gain could be avoided (or at least controlled) by an approach to total health in a smoking withdrawal program.

The weight gain also minimized improvements in aerobic power (a way of measuring physical fitness) in persons who had quit. In relative terms, the majority of the persons who quit smoking were worse off (as a result of the general weight gain) than they were while smoking.

Watch Weight

All the more reason for making sure that smokers not only quit but keep their weight under control so they can quit permanently.

The general decline in pulse rate with length of abstinence from smoking should be exploited as an immediate and obvious improvement, keeping in mind that "most health-conscious individuals are aware of the association between a slow pulse rate and cardiorespiratory fitness.

The study also reveals carbon monoxide levels in the blood of habitual smokers to exceed by far the two per cent threshold for impairment of psychomotor performance. "In view of recent public interest in carbon monoxide air pollution," the early drop in the blood level of carbon monoxide after abstinence provides another immediate improvement for persons in anti-smoking programs.

In a slightly different vein, the researchers stress that the personality of the typical smoker should be put to use by organizers of anti-smoking and withdrawal clinics, as well as by advertisers.

Some unfavorable aspects of a smoker's personality that could be exploited, they suggest, are: the smoker is anxious and neurotic compared to the nonsmoker; the smoker is in some respects deficient in the normal sexual attributes of personality (for example, women tend to be more masculine); particularly for the male, smoking becomes a symbolic search for masculinity; and the smoker is dependent and suggestible compared to the nonsmoker, without the claimed virtue of a happy, extroverted personality.

Better Plan

The researchers say that the emphasis of concentrating on hazards to future health is of questionable value in convincing people to stop smoking.

Generally, they say it seems more likely that the most effective approach will continue to be prevention of smoking in the adolescent.

"And, at this age in particular, our observations on the deficient sexual characteristics of the smoker seem to be a powerful propaganda weapon," they conclude.

'Wash Out' Sign Posted

SEATTLE (AP) — A local woman became tired of the dust raised by passing vehicles ruining her laundry so she hung a sign outside which read: "Wash Out." She was arraigned in the local court on a charge of erecting illegal traffic controls. Her lawyer said that all day long cars sped past the woman's home on a rural road, despite the sign.

Parent-Training Program Aims To Banish Communication Gap

By HELEN MELNYK
Times Staff

"You had better clean your room up."

"It is your duty to do your homework."

"Your hair is too long."

"That's not what you mean."

Sound familiar?

If Mom and Dad were P.E.T. graduates, they would recognize such responses as roadblocks to communication.

Parent Effectiveness Training classes are being offered to interested parents by the Continuing Education division of the Saanich School Board starting Monday, Jan. 17 at 7:30 p.m. in Claremont Senior Secondary School. The purpose of the course is to teach parents family communication and child-rearing skills.

Parents Blamed

Parents are blamed for troubled and troublesome youth, but they are not trained to cope with the job of child rearing, says Dr. Thomas Gordon, a California psychologist who put together the course. His work in family counselling convinced Gordon that parent-child conflicts are caused by a lack of communication and co-operation in working out problems.

In his book Parent Effectiveness Training, which is to be used as a textbook for the Victoria-run course, Gordon outlines the "no-lose" program for rearing children.

Parents today rely on methods of child-rearing that date back 2,000 years, according to Gordon. Parent-child differences have been fought out in the battle of wills.

Gordon proposes a democratic approach in family interactions. Both parent and child should communicate their needs and fears to each other. Where a conflict of needs arises, a solution agreeable to both parties should be negotiated. Thus neither child nor parent is winner nor loser.

The effectiveness of the "no-lose" program depends on the ability of the parent to respect the "civil liberties" of the child, stresses Gordon. Parents must realize that their children are not extensions of themselves, but separate beings. A parent may try to share his beliefs and values with his child, but he must never force them. Gordon believes that a child has a right to a freedom of thought.

He claims that it is possible to raise responsible, self-disciplined children without using any form of punishment.

Training classes will focus on three aspects of family relationships: listening, verbalizing one's own feelings, and problem solving, said Dr. L. W. Axmaker, counselling psychologist for the Greater Victoria School Board and one of the instructors of the course.

Before learning the skills of communication parents learn to recognize the blocks to parent-child understanding.

Parents tune out their children by responding to their messages by orders, threats, preachings, judgments, cross-examinations and so on said Axmaker.

Communication channels are kept open when the parent employs "active listening," he said.

"People rarely say what they really mean; they speak in a code. Through active listening the parent is able to decode what the child is saying. For example a child may come home and tell his mother that he hates school. But the real problem may be that he flunked the spelling test or the teacher yelled at him.

"Instead of responding with an immediate answer or put-down, the parent feeds back the child's statements. This means that he restates what the child has said in his own words to show that he has been attending to what has been said and to make sure that his understanding is correct."

'I'm Mad'

As well as learning how to listen, parents learn how to communicate their own feelings without placing any blame on their children, said Axmaker. This means that instead of saying 'You make me mad,' a parent will tell his child 'I am mad.' He is no longer placing any blame on the child.

"Parents will tell their children that they are upset, but will rarely say why they are angry," he said. "In one of the classes there was a man whose children were very rowdy in the car. He would shout at them, but it didn't help. Then he tried explaining to them that he was afraid that their noise might prove such a distraction that he would lose control of the car. After that they piped down."

Communication is very important before any solution to problems can be arrived at, said Axmaker. "Parent and child should sit down and discuss matters, and then base a solution on that information. Often parents discover that the needs of their child are very different from what they imagined."

Once the actual problem is determined then both parties can work at coming up with a solution acceptable to both, he said. An example of such a solution is as follows.

Johnnie has adopted raggedy jeans as his school uniform. Dad's first reaction would probably be: "No kid of mine is going to school dressed like that!" But through active listening, he finds out why his son prefers tattered denims to tweed trousers. Then Dad lets Johnnie know why he disapproves through a series of "I expressions." After the pair have enlightened each other of their feelings, they may agree that Johnnie be allowed to wear jeans, but not raggedy ones.

Though some people are instinctively good parents, most need a little coaching, according to Axmaker. They are taught skills through lectures, tapes, and acting out roles in the classroom. After each lesson parents are to go home and practise their newly acquired know-how on their youngsters, reporting the results at the next session.

Won't Hurt

"We can teach parents skills and give them practice, but it's ultimately up to them whether they use what they learn in their home," said Axmaker. "One of the basic understandings of the course is that when people learn to communicate, they will not want to do or say things that will hurt others."

The parent who wishes to be "effective" has to pay a price, however. The course costs $40 per person and $60 for a couple.

Mental Illness Moves Into New Era in U.K.

LONDON (CP) — Britain is to lose her grim, isolated mental hospitals as medical treatment of the mentally ill moves into a revolutionary new era here, designed to make the patient feel part of society instead of cutting him off from it.

The essence of the new policy, announced recently by Social Services Minister Sir Keith Joseph, is that in future psychiatric treatment will form part of the regular National Health Service care provided by ordinary hospitals. The mentally sick will thus be treated on much the same footing as the physically ill.

'Lunatic Asylums'

The old hospitals, many dating from Victorian days when they bore the odious label of "lunatic asylums," will be done away with during the next 15 years, Joseph told the Commons in a written statement. There will be a gradual reduction in the numbers of their patients until the transition is complete.

Elderly patients with nowhere else to go and chronic mental patients will be transferred to small residential hospitals in the area while the rest will move to modern psychiatric wards in 230 district general hospitals being planned for England and Wales.

By 1975, 170 of the new hospitals are scheduled to be in operation, either completely new structures or modernized older buildings.

Joseph said the average psychiatric unit in these hospitals would hold 120 beds. At present, in-patient treatment averaged three months, but the new plan meant a greater emphasis on out-patient treatment.

There would be "day hospitals" where patients could be given work to do; social workers to help families when patients return home to live, and co-ordinated welfare facilities by local authorities who would receive a special grant.

England and Wales now have about 116,000 mental patients in 116 special hospitals. Joseph reminded the Commons that about five per cent of Britain's population will suffer some form of temporary mental illness during their lives—"about two people in any bus," as he pointed out.

"In their way, the vast Victorian mental hospitals led the world, but they are entirely isolated and often 10 miles or so from the homes of their patients," the minister said.

The drug revolution had "entirely changed" treatment of psychosis, neurosis and schizophrenia, he added, and persons with mental disorders now went into hospitals and were cured.

Joseph recalled that until the Mental Health Act of 1959, which relaxed some of the fearsome formalities surrounding mental treatment in the old days, half the people who had suffered mental illness had been treated under "certification" — legal detention of the insane.

Attitude Changed

Today only about seven per cent are legally detained.

The Guardian commented in an editorial that public attitudes towards mental illness had undergone something of a revolution in recent years.

"There is greater acceptance now that there is nothing more shameful in suffering a nervous breakdown than in having an appendix removed."

Processing Studied

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some persons are concerned that food processing destroys much nutritive value and leaves only empty calories in the form of sugar, carbohydrates and oils without any vitamins and other nutrients.

Dr. T. E. Hartung, chairman of the department of Food Science and Technology, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration continuously is examining the processing methods to assure that no massive destruction of food nutrients occurs.

Needy Help Others

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Three housewives have set up an organization enabling needy persons in the Orillia district to help one another.

The women, who have asked to remain unidentified, have organized Exchange Service Action, a registry for people who need services they cannot afford and have services of their own to offer.

"I might have car trouble and some other member can fix it for me," one of the women said. "I might not be able to repay that person but perhaps I can help another in some way and that person could help the man who fixed my car."

The object of ESA is to help a needy individual keep his pride by allowing him to contribute something to others to earn the assistance he receives.

"The welfare aren't enough," she said. "We can do more and get more by helping each other."

Customs Officials Make Me Nervous

Aside from the rather distasteful prospect of parachuting out at 30,000 feet somewhere over water, there seems to be no way to avoid going through customs.

Now I know that Customs officials are as much a part of our Way of Life as are library fines and one-way streets, but I am able to retain a modicum of composure when dealing with library fines and one-way streets. Customs officials make me nervous.

The last time that I stood in line waiting to be searched for contraband, I suddenly noticed a suspicious-looking bulge in my coat pocket. I reasoned that it was probably my handkerchief, but what if I looked and it turned out to be seven kilos of heroin that someone had slipped into my pocket while I had been watching the stewardess demonstrate the use of the oxygen mask?

I gazed aghast at the bulge in my coat. Should I simply pull out the heroin and blow my nose on it? Or perhaps glance at the ceiling and shriek, "Don't jump!", then while everyone is looking up, fling it into the corner and begin humming?

Beads of sweat broke out on my upper lip. I would have wiped them off had I had a handkerchief in my pocket instead of seven kilos of heroin.

Next I was overwhelmed with the sickening realization that I had forgotten to declare the pipe tobacco that I had bought for Uncle Smitty. I knew that they would find the pipe tobacco next to my sweatshirt with the peace symbol on it, and they would say "Ah hah!". While I was fairly sure that marijuana doesn't smell like regular pipe tobacco, this was a special blend that smelled like chipped beef. Which is probably the exact aroma of Acapulco Gold.

Actually there were no problems, as the customs official recognized me.

"Hey, you write that great column, don't you?"

"Yes," I replied, modestly scuffing my toe on the floor.

Test Tube Baby Issue Gives Rise to Debate

NEW YORK (AP) — The day appears to be nearing when scientists will announce either the implantation, or perhaps even the birth, of a "test tube baby."

Such a dramatic and controversial event would emphasize to the world the developing genetic and biological revolution, with scientists working to bring man closer to new controls over human life.

A test tube baby would be conceived outside the human body — literally in the laboratory — with scientists fertilizing the woman's egg with the man's sperm in a test tube.

The fertilized egg would then grow and divide in the test tube until it developed sufficiently. Then it would be implanted in the woman's uterus to continue growing until a nomal birth could take place.

The object is to help women have children despite a blockage of their fallopian tubes, through which the fertilized egg must normally pass.

Statements about plans to create a test tube baby have come recently from scientists in Britain, with similar work reported under way in Belgium and Japan.

Dr. Douglas Bevis, a researcher at Jessop Hospital in Sheffield, England, said early in January he is ready to implant an artificially-impregnated embryo in the womb of a volunteer.

Also in Britain, Dr. Robert G. Edwards of Cambridge University and Dr. P. C. Steptoe at General Hospital in Oldham said that last October they successfully took an egg from a woman, fertilized it in the laboratory with her husband's sperm and grew it until it was ready for implantation. But they did not take the final step.

This kind of research also could lead to determining the sex of the fetus in the test tube stage.

The complications that could develop seem vast. Would a woman hire another woman to carry a fetus created with her own egg and husband's sperm? Whose baby would the baby be?

On the beneficial side, this work might lead to the ability to correct genetic defects before implantation, thus elminating some diseases.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Changes occur at home base. Short journey is on agenda. Obtain valid hint from Libra message. One close to you has your best interests at heart. Restrain tendency to be pugnacious. Take it easy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Separate actual requirements from mere whims. Check budget. Take inventory. See situations in light of reality. Friend may mean well, but could be misinformed. Respond accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Practical issues should dominate. Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Lunar cycle is such that professional opportunities prevail. Choose the best; don't sell yourself short. One you respect appreciates efforts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Message, news which you had been awaiting does arrive. You don't exactly have green light — but you do find out where you stand. Relationship is put to test. Look to future. Discard past burden.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friend with original plan deserves attention — and appreciation. Look ahead; perceive potential. Travel and study are now emphasized. You can improve standing — key is to want to do so. You get what is needed.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have intellectual curiosity, are attractive, fond of travel, good with languages and usually able to make others see things your way. Your most significant months in 1972 are likely to be January and October.

dear abby

Respect Needed

DEAR ABBY: How long are you gonig to pollute the world with your ignorance?

Someone wrote and told you that in his native country (India) it was all right under certain conditions to make another man's wife pregnant. And you replied, "Thank you for illustrating a point which we in the Western World are apt to forget. We represent a very small part of the world, and what we consider 'immoral" or 'unethical' is not necessarily immoral or unethical in other countries and for other cultures."

Well, he is wrong and so are you! Just because they do it in other countries doesn't make it right.

You ignorant woman. Have you not read the Ten Commandments? Have you not read in the New Testament that Christians are to go all over the world and teach the gospel? That includes India, too.

It is polluters like you who delude ignorant people into believing that immoral acts are all right. It's time Christians everywhere wrote to you and demanded that you speak the truth.—Disgusted With You

DEAR DISGUSTED: The essence of all religions is to love your neighbor as yourself. And to love one's neighbor, we must respect his beliefs, though they be different from our own. To try to impose our values on others is not only a denial of their rights, but also a form of arrogance, which in itself is irreligious. An ancient Hebrew prayer put it very well:

"From the cowardice that shrinks from new truth,

From the laziness that is content with half-truths,

From the arrogance that thinks it knows all truth,

Oh, God of Truth, deliver us."

How Boy Courts Girl in 1990

TORONTO (CP) — The year is 1990.

Boy meets girl at a party. He's strongly attracted to her and his interest mounts. He sees a serious relationship looming, so he asks her: "What's your code number? I want to look you up."

The boy is referring to the computer-compiled profile of the young woman that is available at a central depot which records her background, beliefs, health, interests and personality traits.

But the girl declines to disclose her code number, leading the boy to the conclusion that she isn't interested in him or has something to hide.

"That's the way courtship will be conducted within 20 years," says Dr. Leo Davids, 23, a sociologist at York University in Toronto.

"Young people won't waste time courting partners who are grossly incompatible."

He said in an interview his predictions were not guesswork. "They're scientific estimates based on trends already under way or coming very soon. Given a number of known facts you can figure out the rest.

"Fatherhood, for example, is going to be vastly changed two decades from now."

Picture the office of the human relations director in an industrial plant. A young husband is explaining that he's just become a father — therefore he'll be working part-time for the next eight or 10 years. The director is not surprised... Legal provision exists that frees fathers to spend at least 20 leisure hours a week with their younger children.

"It's becoming increasingly appreciated that working fathers are responsible for more child neglect than working mothers," Mr. Davids said. "Remedial action will be taken in the future."

If Dr. Davids' forecasts prove to be accurate the 1990s will be a bleak period for the writers of traditional style songs, poems, movies and novels.

He says romantic love will practically disappear.

Young people today are rejecting the romantic myth, Mr. Davids said. "They are drawn, generally, to what they call 'beautiful people.' They don't fall in love at first sight. Rather, a gradual process of mutual discovery sometimes results in love.

"A boy meets a girl but before he commits himself deeply, he makes sure that her values and personal philosophy are akin to his. In other words, the beautiful creature is being asked to state her views.

"In the future the only people retaining a belief in romantic love will be found among the uneducated and the poor."

He said a popular type of union will be the three to five-year childless trial marriage. At the end of the term, the contract comes up for discussion and the couple can decide to continue as before, opt out or renew it on different terms.

And, he said, the most radical changes will occur in the approach to parenthood where adults wanting to reproduce will be required to tender an application to a local parenthood board that consists of physicians, psychologists, geneticists and social workers.

TV Violence Studied

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (UPI) — What's the likelihood of Johnny whacking playmate Billy just after watching his hero on television clobber a bad guy? Pretty good, according to a study by sociologist William Schweiker of West Virginia University — particularly if Johnny didn't get that extra cookie he wanted at lunch.

His study of the relationship between children watching violence on television, frustration, and aggressive play behavior surprised Schweiker to this extent: when a child was shown violent films and then frustrated, the aggressive play was about three times higher in some cases.

7,000 Abortions in 1972

A record 7,000 therapeautic abortions at a probable cost of $1 million are expected to be performed in British Columbia hospitals this year.

A preliminary check of the number of abortions performed until the end of November came to 6,396, contrasting sharply with the 2,399 performed during the same period in 1970.

There has been a sharp increase since the Criminal Code was "liberalized" in the fall of 1969.

A conservatively estimated average cost of $50 per operation — for hospital costs and another total of $700,000 for doctors' fees, laboratory tests and other services, puts the provincial abortion bill in the range of $1 million.

This year's statistics means that about 30 fetuses are aborted every working day in the province's hospitals.

Royal Jubilee Hospital, which does most Greater Victoria abortions, averages between 12 and 14 a week.

Logger Calls Ecologists 'Troublemakers'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environmental groups were criticized as troublemakers Wednesday by Jack Sexton of Vancouver, president of the Truck Loggers Association of B.C.

Sexton told the association convention that ecologists and environmentalists have damaged the forest industry seriously with their protests against logging projects.

"B.C. is not a province dominated by and polluted by industry as too many confused people would have us think," he said.

"And I think it is pertinent to point out that industry should not be a financial scapegoat of policies to open new roads and fishing areas to build camping grounds and trails."

He said that when large areas of land are set aside for ecological studies the land is probably lost forever to multiple use.

Sexton also complained about government regulations that logging operations leave strips of timber untouched along the banks of waterways and forbid sediment from logged areas going into streams where fish spawn.

He said leaving strips along waterways was "impracticable from the point of view of the economics of logging."

Sexton said the value of fish spawning in a particular stream should be weighed against the economic value of the logging operation.

"We must not lose sight of the fact that as long as business is legal in Canada, we as business managers have the right to operate our business in a manner to make a reasonable profit," he said.

Forestry consultant Ian Mahood also condemned conservationists for opposing the practice of clear-cutting in the forestry industry in B.C.

Clear-cutting, the practice of clearing all trees rather than selectively logging some trees, should be practiced in some sections of the province but not in others, Mahood said.

Resources Minister Ray Williston, an earlier speaker, said clear-cutting is the only practice which makes economic and managerial common sense in the province.

Mahood said any concession to demands by conservation groups to end clear-cutting would "be very damaging to our economy."

He said some forests, where all trees are of equal age, and grow closely together, could only be harvested by the clear-cutting methods.

Teen-Ager On Tour Kidnapped

SANTA FE, Argentina (UPI) — An extremist commando group kidnapped a Brazilian teen-ager on a Rotary Club-sponsored trip here Wednesday and asked the club to pay the wages of 10 nurses for a year as ransom.

Rotary officials called an urgent press conference late Wednesday afternoon in which they said they would meet the demands.

The youth, 17-year-old Antonio Carlos Duarte, arrived here Wednesday morning with 50 other youths from throughout the hemisphere.

Witneses said Duarte was thrown into a waiting car as he walked along a street near the centre of the city with several companions.

Police later found a communique in a bar which demanded the Rotary Club "take care of paying the salaries of 10 nurses in children's hospitals."

The communique was signed by the "Revolutionary Armed Forces" (F.A.R.) and the "Liberation Armed Forces" (F.A.L.) Both are urban guerrilla organizations which backed exiled dictator Juan Domingo Peron.

Terrorist Carried Grenades

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Security authorities said Wednesday a 28-year-old terrorist was shot to death by police in the grandstand of a football stadium as he tried to throw a grenade that could have killed and maimed spectators.

A communique from federal police said agents spotted the suspect, Jeova Assis Gomes, one of the 40 prisoners who was exchanged in 1970 for kidnapped West German Ambassador Ehrenfried Von Holleben, while he was attending a football game Sunday in the rural town of Guara, in northern Goias State.

Police called him out of the game. Gomes walked 15 yards and suddenly threw himself to the ground, pulling a grenade out of his picket, the communique said.

Before he could pull the pin, police shot him to death "in order to avoid the death of a large number of fans," the communique said.

Two other grenades were found in his pockets.

SILSBY—In Victoria on Wednesday, January 12, 1972, Mr. William Oliver Silsby of 1111 - 1013 Vancouver St. Mr. Silsby was born in Brighton, England and came to Canada in 1910, residing in Ottawa for many years prior to retiring to Victoria in 1950. He served for many years with the R.C.A.F. He was a member of the Fidelity Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Ottawa and of St. John's Anglican Church. He is survived by his loving wife Mabel, at the residence and by one niece and one nephew in Ottawa.
The funeral service will be conducted on Friday January 14, 1972 at 1:30 p.m. from St. John's Anglican Church, with the Rev. Canon Graham Baker officiating, followed by cremation. CHAPLIN'S FUNERAL CHAPEL in charge of arrangements.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

9 IN MEMORIAM

KNIGHT — In loving memory of William (Bill) Knight, who died suddenly January 13, 1962.
Our lives are mostly froth and bubble
But two things I have known
Kindness in another's trouble
Courage in my own
Lonely years pass like shadows on a pool
His love protected me as a lamp in darkness
—Mrs. Mary Knight and Family.

ZALA — In loving memory of Mrs. Rose Zala, "one of God's Jewels". Called Home Jan. 13, 1971. Loved by all who knew her.
"We do not lose the ones we love
They only go before
Where there is everlasting life
Where sorrow is no more
And there the soul will always live
And peace is everywhere
We do not lose the ones we love
God takes them in His care."
—Lovingly remembered by her husband and family.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Are Seances a Hoax?

In a recent issue of the beautiful medical journal, MD, there was an interesting article on a subject which interests many a physician and his patients as well. Do mediums really make contact with a dead person at a seance?

There is a question about fraudulence. For example, in the article, I read that in 1848 two mischievous American girls tied a string to an apple and pumped it on the floor at night, thus frightening their credulous mother. The results exceeded their wildest dreams. Tales of occult doing spread through the village, then through the United States and eventually the world, and the prankster girls were launched on life-time careers in the "occult." They learned to produce rapping sounds by snapping joints in their fingers, toes, knees and ankles, and they went on lecture tours, performing seances and calling themselves mediums.

Many years later they confessed that their "spirit" had been a playful hoax, but they continued their lecture tours, this time exposing credulity and revealing how their tricks had been performed.

Curiously, a number of very able persons have accepted the reality of spiritualism and some have been very much interested in what goes on in seances. Such famous persons as Thomas Huxley, Robert and Elizabeth Browning, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Houdini, Napoleon the Third, and Dr. Carl Jung have studied and investigated the subject.

Seances have come to be conducted under a well-established set of rules. Generally the "cast of characters" consists of a medium, who may work in a state of trance or may remain conscious throughout the sitting, there may be several participants, known as sitters, who need not be practising spiritualists but must have a receptive attitude, and one or more "spirits". The spirits are presumed to be sensitive, often moody, easily frightened or annoyed, and hence certain procedures must be followed if communication is to be established between one of the participants and his or her dead relative.

The medium is usually a woman who perhaps feels that she was born with special powers; she feels that she is a sort of psychic antenna for receiving messages from "beyond".

Mediums are divided into physical and mental types — the physical ones expressing spirit communications with such signs as automatic writing, table levitation (lifting), and luminous effects. The mental mediums merely receive messages and transmit them. They say the effect of a seance is debilitating and exhausting, and hence, as the writer of the article notes, quite a few mediums have sought relief in alcohol.

WATERVIEW
HOME PLUS REVENUE
MUST BE SOLD

My instructions are to sell! This fabulous piece of property must be seen to be appreciated. You are left in utter surprise when you enter what appears to be a small, ordinary home. Sitting close to the ground in front yet offering a 9 ft. basement that is finished and offering much the same view as enjoyed from the expansive windows in the upstairs living and dining room. There is no way I can put on paper all there is to offer in this 17 year old View Royal home. There is even a very good reason for the low asking price of $27,500.

Help for Struck Company

Non-union contractors will provide direct help to a sub-contractor struck eight days ago by the plasterers union, a spokesman for the Right to Work Association of Vancouver Island said today.

Lawyer George Jones, secretary-treasurer of the association, said several men will assist Demand Drywall Systems Ltd. to finish sub-contracting work in a week instead of the usual two weeks.

Local 450 of the Operative Plasterers and Cement Masons struck the firm in an attempt to gain a first agreement. The company has said there is "no way" it will sign a union agreement.

The union has been picketing building sites on Lampson, Selkirk and Shelbourne where Demand Drywall has sub-contracts.

Jones also said the Right to Work Association has hired a full-time manager, Peter Polet, and will consider setting up an office. He said the association has 50 members, comprising 35 companies and 15 individuals.

Widow, 40, Gets Chevalier Bequest

PARIS (Reuter) — A 40-year-old widow is the chief beneficiary of the estate of the late Maurice Chevalier, sources close to his family said Thursday.

The woman, former actress Odette Melier, was a friend of the entertainer for the last 20 years and his closest companion in the months preceding his death, they said.

The entertainer married singer Yvonne Vallee 1922 and they were divorced in 1934. They had no children.

It is believed that Mrs. Melier and her handicapped 16-year-old daughter will move into Chevalier's sumptuous villa near Paris.

Other beneficiaries of the estate include a number of charitable organizations which help old actors and pensioners in the working-class area of Paris where Chevalier was born.

While the exact estate of the entertainer has not been made public, a newspaper usually well-informed on Chevalier estimated it at about $20 million.

Congressman Picked Up In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet police picked up Representative James H. Scheuer (Dem. — N.Y.) Wednesday night at the home of a Soviet Jewish professor and detained him for nearly two hours.

Scheuer, visiting the Soviet Union as a member of a United States congressional subcommittee on education, said the incident occurred at the home of Prof. Alexander Lerner.

While he was at the Lerner home, two policemen came to the door and said they were searching the neighborhood for a criminal who might be masquerading as a foreigner, Scheuer said.

Scheuer offered a number of identification cards, including his congressional card, but was unable to present his passport and was taken to a police station.

He said that after waiting for more than an hour in a small room at the police station, he was released.

Russian Goes Home Willingly

NEW YORK (AP) — A Russian exchange student who slashed his throat and wrists at Kennedy International Airport last Sunday flew home today after a six-hour diplomatic tug-of-war ended with U.S. officials convinced that he was leaving of his own accord.

"It is my judgment that he is going of his own free will," said Samuel Zutty, investigator for the U.S. immigration service, after he and other U.S. officials interviewed Merab Kurashvily, 36, at the airport early today.

The U.S. authorities had delayed the scheduled 8:30 p.m. departure of the Soviet Aeroflot airliner for six hours Wednesday night while insisting they be allowed to talk to Kurashvily. Soviet officials said the plane would not depart without the student.

Coast Vicar Leighton Dies at 84

TOFINO — Rev. John Wright Leighton, a friend of west coast loggers, fishermen and miners, died in Tofino Hospital Tuesday. He was 84.

Leighton was former vicar for two different terms of the Ucluelet and Tofino Anglican Churches prior to his retirement.

He was also padre of branch No. 65 Royal Canadian Legion, chaplain of the Manoah Lodge AFAM and BCR and of the Tofino Scouts and other local organzations.

Rahman Takes Key Jobs

DACCA (AP) — Prime Minister Sheik Mujibur Rahman took the key portfolios of defence, home affairs and information today as he assigned jobs to his new Bangladesh cabinet.

The new government, sworn in Wednesday, announced the assignments after a cabinet session. Mujib also will be cabinet affairs minister.

Abdu Samad Azad will continue in the 12-man cabinet as foreign minister, the job he has held since Dec. 28 under the caretaker government that set up operations in Dacca after the Indian army defeated the Pakistanis Dec. 16.

Samad is considered to be pro-Moscow, although the new government has not yet spelled out its foreign policy except to say it will be non-aligned.

Mujib gave the former prime minister, Tajuddin Ahmed, the portfolios of finance and planning, and Syed Nazrul Islam, acting president until Mujib returned Monday from imprisonment in Pakistan, was named minister of industry, trade and commerce.

By holding the home and defence portfolios, Mujib will exercise direct control over the police and military forces.

Probe Ordered In Auto Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford has ordered an investigation of charges that imported car dealers misrepresent the model year of outdated cars left in stock each September.

In a letter to MP Barry Mather (NDP—White Rock) released Thursday, the minister said an investigation was required by the "serious nature" of the allegations made last November by the three-year-old Automobile Protection Association.

The association, affiliated with U.S. consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said imported car dealers "steal thousands of dollars" from customers buying old-model cars represented as new models. Dealers, they said, charge new-model prices for the cars but at trade-in time the customer learns his vehicle has depreciated a full year more than expected.

Among the companies authorizing the alleged practice were Ford, British Leyland, Fiat, Renault, Volvo and the Nissan Company Ltd., manufacturers of Datsun.

The Nissan Company responded to the charge by saying their dealers were instructed to inform the customer of the redating practice.

"When we followed the . . . practice, we have always expected our dealers to explain to their customers about this practice in import sales to avoid any possible misunderstanding."

Volvo of Canada Ltd., denies it redates its products. In a letter to Mr. Mather the company says all of its model years are clearly identified by serial number, sales contract and minor styling changes.

A change in the model year of imported cars with few annual styling changes is usually designated by the manufacturer who then informs the provincial transport departments of the date such a change takes effect.

Missing Girls Alive, Well

PRETORIA, South Africa (Reuter) — Three teen-age American girls who disappeared Monday have been found in Heidelberg, about 30 miles southwest of Johannesburg, police said.

Plot Your Course At Vacation Spot

The middle of January seems a marvellous time to plan for a summer away from the city even so small and pleasant a city as Victoria.

Some keen gardeners find they must, due to occupational or other reasons, be away at a summer home for the four months and thus are unable to plan for a vegetable garden at home.

If this is happening to you, and you are likely to have even a small plot of soil 15 feet square — don't feel too badly, you can grow things to eat while you are there by plotting your course now.

Ambition is one of the keynotes to a happy life, but don't plan for a big vegetable garden unless two or three people will be working on the project.

Fifteen feet square will be enough if you must prepare a piece of rough ground alone, and weed and water by hand. You may need to carry water some distance and conserve its use.

Vegetables to grow by sowing in the ground before the end of May to use by about the seventh and eighth week are green onions, lettuce, radish, summer spinach.

Carrots and beets will give tasty thinnings (and beet tops) at about eight weeks and those left well spaced will be a nice size before the summer months are over.

Most of the herbs can be sown in a small patch for using fresh with the salad vegetables, and pieces to go as flavoring into all manner of "pot" dinners so dear to a camp cook's heart.

Sow thyme, sage, summer savory, parsley, sweet marjoram and take a few pieces of mint root with you.

If you can manage it, from the transportation angle, you can take along a flat of early green bush beans, started one to a small peat pot; a flat of early dwarf peas started in pots and a dozen zucchini squash plants for tender summer squash in July.

And you could, with some extra ambition and suitable facilities, either raise or buy a half flat of early summer cauliflower and a half flat of an early summer small green cabbage.

Nothing is impossible. The soil where you are spending the summer months may or may not be good for growing vegetables, but you will get results worth noting. You are likely to be able to turn into it either grass, bracken, or leafmould, any or all of which helps to hold moisture at the roots of your vegetables.

In a sunny location, some extra care perhaps in feeding with alginure foliar spray to strengthen the plants against insect attacks, and some luck in weather, your summer camp garden will bring its own rewards.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, which arose in a rubber-bridge game, nothing more was involved than the matter or whether South made one or two overtricks at his game contract. But, since technique is technique, our South declarer's "counting" approach to the play of the hand is worth examining for future reference and utilization.

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ K J 7
♡ K 10 5
◇ A Q J 2

WEST
♠ 4 2
♡ 7 4
◇ K 7 5 4
♣ Q J 10 6 3

EAST
♠ 10 9 6 5 3
♡ Q J 9 8 2
◇ 6 3

SOUTH
♠ A Q 8
♡ A 6 3
◇ 10 9 8
♣ K 9 7 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

After winning the opening lead with his ace of clubs, East returned the queen of hearts, South taking the trick with his ace. He then led the diamond ten, West covered with the king, and the board's ace captured the trick.

Next came a diamond to South's nine, after which a diamond was led to North's queen. Then the diamond jack was cashed, East discarding a spade and a heart on the last two leads, while South tossed away a heart. Declarer next cashed the king, queen, and ace of spades, West discarding a club on the third spade lead. The king of hearts was then cashed, everybody following suit. Declarer now paused for reflection.

East was just about absolutely certain to have started with precisely one club. If he had another, he surely would have returned it at trick two, after having captured the opening lead with the club ace. And East had followed suit to exactly two diamond leads. Therefore West had been dealt five clubs and four diamonds.

West had also followed suit to two spade leads and two heart leads. Thus South knew the exact distribution of the 13 cards that had been dealt to West: two spades, two hearts, four diamonds, and five clubs. And, at this point, West's three remaining cards had to be three clubs, specifically the J-10-6. South's three remaining cards were the K-9-7 of clubs.

To trick 11, declarer led the board's eight of clubs, upon which East discarded a heart. South followed suit with the seven spot, and West won the trick with his 10.

West was now end-played, since he had to lead away from his remaining J-6 of clubs into South's K-9. So South scored two overtricks, his only losers being two clubs.

Jerry Lee Loses

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis' failure to appear at a concert at Detroit's Cobo Hall last April 18 has cost him $35,000. Judge Joe Loser ruled Wednesday that Lewis must pay that amount to Richard Blake, a Nashville promoter who lined up the Detroit show for the singer. Blake had sought $150,000.

'Humanitarian' Freed

LONDON (CP) — An official report discloses that Leonard (Jock) Milne of Toronto, who allegedly said he was going to hijack a Pan American World Airways jetliner in Helsinki but didn't, carried an unloaded revolver which he later turned over to police.

Canadian authorities, who completed the report after the 48-year-old Scot was deported from Finland, concluded that the wartime RAF pilot who flew 60 bombing missions over Europe was motivated by humanitarian feelings and that no action will be taken against him.

He was arrested by Helsinki police Dec. 22 after he allegedly telephoned the airline captain, saying he planned to hijack the plane and attempt to trade two Russians aboard for Lithuanian sailor Simas Kudirka, who is in a Russian prison.

Kudirka tried to defect in the U.S. last February by leaping from a Soviet ship to a U.S. Coast Guard cutter. He was handed back at the Russians' request and the case caused an outcry in the U.S.

Milne, a native of Dundee, Scotland, who is director of planning assistance for the United Church of Canada, arrived in Britain last Tuesday and went to the home of a relative, declining to disclose his whereabouts.

No-Fault Ruling Delayed

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

The B.C. Automobile Insurance Board reserved decision Wednesday on whether to order B.C. insurance companies to reduce no-fault insurance premiums.

Board chairman J. F. K. English gave no date for a decision following a hearing in an overflowing jury room at the Law Courts building in Victoria.

Eight of nine briefs presented to the hearing by insurance interests opposed the board's request for a reduction in the rate charged for no-fault accident benefits coverage from the current $20 to $22 level to a maximum of $14.

Only Bryan Rudkin of Westco Insurance Company backed the board, saying his firm had never charged more than $13 for the coverage.

ONE AGENCY

Rudkin also called for more B.C. control of the "Green Book" statistics on which insurance premiums are based. He also suggested greater efficiency could be obtained if the no-fault scheme were administered by a single agency, either private or government.

Such an agency would give the "lie-detect" to claims by insurance companies that a $14 rate would be inadequate for the coverage, Rudkin said.

'HOOTED'

Rudkin was hooted by many of the insurance executives in the room when he said he simply doesn't believe that many insurance companies actually gave $9 reductions in third-party liability rates when the $22 rate was established for no-fault coverage.

ENVY JAMES MARSH!

Nobody likes to be rejected.

Particularly by those wheel-rattling officials out at the motor vehicle testing station.

So, while you can't really condone the action, is there a driver who doesn't secretly envy James O. Marsh, 33, of 3969 Saanich Road?

Marsh took his car into the Saanich station last Dec. 10, fully confident he'd get it through. The car had failed once before and Marsh had his repair receipts at the ready.

But attendant Donald Chaplin flunked it again.

Noisy muffler.

That was too much for Marsh.

He punched poor Donald right in the nose.

And he had to be restrained from doing it again.

Today, the wheels of justice rolled over Marsh. He was fined $50 by Judge William Ostler after pleading guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Cost Rise Sharpest In Decade

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A sharp increase in food prices, especially for imported fresh vegetables, pushed the consumer price index up last month for the biggest November-to-December gain in a decade, Statistics Canada reported today.

The over-all index for December was 136.3, compared with 135.4 in November and 129.8 in December, 1970. The food index accounts for 27 per cent of the over-all index, and it rose to 135.5 from 133.0 in November and 125.6 in December, 1970.

In percentage terms, the over-all index in December was five per cent higher than it was in December, 1970. A year's gain of two per cent is generally regarded as reasonable price stability, and anything more than that is excessive.

Food prices alone were up 7.9 per cent for the year. A large part of this reflects recovery from the unusually low prices which prevailed in the fall of 1970 as the result of a supermarket price war.

FOOD HIGHER

The largest increases were in foods, mainly in fresh vegetables and beef, and in health and personal care items. In the latter category, the big increase in the index was in the price of men's haircuts.

A government spokesman said that despite the rise in prices towards the year-end, the price index performance over the whole of 1971 was moderate. The average of 1971 prices rose 2.9 per cent above the average of 1970 prices, the lowest such increase since 1965.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the announcement showed inflation "is far from dead" and rising prices are "an injustice the Canadian people won't tolerate — even if the Trudeau government will."

FIXED INCOMES

Stanfield said Parliament could remove some of the injustice done to people on fixed incomes by removing the two-per-cent limit by which federal pensions can go up each year to compensate for rising prices. He said Parliament should not have been allowed to recess to Feb. 16.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said the increase is "not something to worry about" and the threat of inflation is "not serious at this time."

U.K. TROOPS, IRA IN STREET BATTLE

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British troops and Irish Republican Army gunmen exchanged machine-gun and rifle fire for two hours in the streets of Londonderry Wednesday, the bullets whizzing near half a dozen terrified children. It was one of the most sustained battles in more than two years of violence in Northern Ireland.

The IRA accused the British of firing on women and children.

British Army spokesmen said the soldiers hit three gunmen during the battle and another gunman in a skirmish at a nearby army post. They denied IRA claims that two soldiers were shot.

In Belfast, three gunmen drove up to a textile printing plant in the city's Roman Catholic Lower Falls area Wednesday night and two of them shot to death reserve policeman Raymond Denham, 43, an electrician at the plant, the army said.

Police said the killing appeared to be an IRA political assassination.

Denham's was the 210th death in Northern Ireland since violence between the Roman Catholic minority and the Protestant majority erupted in the province in August, 1969.

A BBC cameraman said men and women fell flat on the pavement as bullets whizzed overhead. He saw "six or seven children, mere infants, walking straight into the line of fire.

"The shooting was coming from three to four direction," he said. He and a colleague "ran up the road and threw them (the children) into a hedge."

"A woman came out and took them off us," he said. "One little boy was so terrified that his mouth was open but no noise would come out. Another was screaming."

An IRA statement said its men "only entered the scene after soldiers had fired at women and children. We recorded two hits (on British troops)."

Mrs. Mavis Sheerin, who said she had been accompanying five children home from school, told newsmen the soldier "sprayed the field with bullets. There were a considerable number of people scattered about the field, mostly on the way home from school. There was a lot of panic and two girls fainted."

Stays on Rocks

ARCH-A-WAT, Wash. (AP) — Navy officials said today the stern of a transport ship around on the northern Washington coast will remain there until the weather improves sufficiently to get men on the vessel.

The decision was made after navy and civilian salvage experts said it would be impossible to tow or float the section out to deeper water.

Grass Conspiracy

TORONTO (CP) — A Canada Customs officer and four other persons have been charged with conspiracy to import 70 pounds of marijuana, valued at $30,000 into Canada from Jamaica, police said today.

Plane Dead Found

PUCALLPA, Peru (Reuter) — All 91 bodies of the victims of a Christmas Eve jungle plane crash near this central Peruvian town have been recovered, the Peruvian air force said today. The 58 bodies included that of German-born ornithologist Marie Anna Koepcke, whose 17-year-old daughter Juliane was the crash's sole survivor.

Pakistan Retaliates

Ghana Army Officers Stage Bloodless Coup

The coup members, led by Lt.-Col. I. K. Achampong, told Ghanaians in a countrywide broadcast that the constitution has been suspended, political parties banned and Parliament dissolved.

The airport was closed, but reopened a few hours later, while normal communication with the outside world was cut. The cable office and the Ghana News Agency were under armed guard.

The coup came while Prime Minister Kofi A. Busia was in Britain for a medical check-up. He was a host to Mrs. Richard M. Nixon last week during her tour of West Africa.

In London, Busia was said by a spokesman to be taking the news calmly. But the spokesman did not say what Busia's next move would be.

DISCONTENT WIDESPREAD

The overthrow of Busia's government followed widespread discontent over a 44-per-cent devaluation of the currency Dec. 27, skyrocketing inflation, mass unemployment and what the radio called "mismanagement" of government.

The radio, between broadcasts of martial music, said Ghana will be temporarily led by a "national redemption council" made up of army officers, traditional chiefs, representatives of the Trade Union Congress and members of Ghana's Christian and Moslem Council and the Ghana Assembly of Women.

The Trade Union Congress had been dissolved under Busia.

The army said the government will include civilian advisers.

There was no word that army garrisons in other parts of Ghana had joined the coup leaders in Accra and there was no mention of arrests but members of Parliament were urged to check in with army authorities "for their own safety."

The new government said it will review the devaluation and study a five-per-cent rural development levy on salaries and other controversial measures by the Busia government.

ARCTIC COLD GRIPS WEST

Furnaces worked overtime Wednesday as an Arctic cold front gripped Alberta, Saskatchewan and northern British Columbia.

The cold dropped in Tuesday night and temperatures plunged to record lows for Jan. 12 at Fort Chipewyan and Coronation in Alberta and Fort Nelson in northwestern B.C.

Fort Chipewyan reported 42 below, six degrees lower than the 36 recorded in 1966. Coronation shivered in 28 below, one degree colder than the previous record in 1966, and Fort Nelson equalled a 1953 low of 45 below.

The weather office said no relief is in sight for at least three days. The forecast for today was highs of 25 below in northern and central areas, and 15 below in the south.

PhD Planted Bank Bombs, Says FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man described as a U.S. Army private with a PhD from Stanford University has been charged in connection with the planting of time bombs in three San Francisc banks, the FBI announced today.

Attorney-General John N. Mitchell and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover identified the suspect as Ronald Kaufman, who has been charged in a federal warrant issued in San Francisco with maliciously attempting to damage and destroy the three banks.

Kaufman, still at large, was identified through fingerprints found on various bomb components taken from the bank safe deposit boxes, Hoover said.

The announcement said Kaufman, 33, was born in Milwaukee, Wis., and lived in Berkeley, Calif., until July, 1971, shortly before he re-enlisted in the army.

600 Desert Airport Towers

OTTAWA (CP) — Union officials called in vain today for an immediate return to work by close to 600 control tower technicians who are staging 24-hour study sessions at most major airports across the country.

A spokesman for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers said the study sessions amounted to illegal strikes.

Union officials tried late Wednesday to head off the first of the study sessions by 40 technicians at Montreal International and nearby St. Hubert airports which began at 1 a.m. EST today.

Picket lines were later reported to have been set up at Toronto International Airport. In Ottawa, the technicians reported to the airport but were not readily available for work.

The technicians service radar, navigational and communications equipment and the walkouts have had little if any effect on airport operations. Problems with equipment, however, could result in delays at peak hours.

In Vancouver, a spokesman for the union said it was discouraging any illegal work stoppages and that members would not walk out.

In Victoria, airport manager John Knowland said this morning there was no walkout by three technicians. Flights were operating normally.

Jail Guards Shun Bilingual Flash

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 250 prison guards at the British Columbia Penitentiary said Wednesday they would support any guard who refuses to wear new bilingual shoulder flashes.

James Clink, president of the New Westminster local of the public service alliance, said the guards had "a full discussion" before voting to support any member who is subject to disciplinary action for refusing to wear the patches.

The solicitor-general's department has ordered all federal prison guards to wear the bilingual flashes by Friday.

The report said English-speaking guards at federal prisons across Canada viewed the bilingual flashes as a step in a plan by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer to make the penitentiary service primarily French-Canadian.

The report said the solicitor-general originally ordered the flashes to be worn by Dec. 15. When the order was largely disregarded, the government issued a deadline of Jan. 15, stating that the guards, as government employees, must follow government policy in the matter.

Clink declined to give a figure on how many men at the B.C. Penitentiary were refusing to wear the new patches, but added he was "certain some of the men will not wear them."

Oil Tanker Shipments Via Strait Inevitable, NDP Caucus Told

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

OLYMPIA — Despite continuing Canadian attempts to delay or prevent construction of an oil pipeline to Valdez, Alaska, Washington state legislators said Wednesday they consider oil tanker shipments through Juan de Fuca Strait to be inevitable.

This view was expressed by Harold Wolf, House majority whip, at a joint press conference in Olympia attended by British Columbia's New Democratic Party caucus.

Opposition Leader Dave Barret said he was shocked to learn the Atlantic-Richfield company has ordered three supertankers, each capable of carrying one million barrels of oil for delivery to its refinery at Cherry Point, just south of the U.S.-Canadian border.

Barrett had told reporters the Canadian government would prefer an oil pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley. He said the NDP would never change its oppositon to tanker shipments from Valdez to Cherry Point.

Wolf told Barrett he wondered how serious Canada was about promoting the Mackenzie route when it was clear to Washington residents the Cherry Point refinery will require delivery of oil by water.

"When you say the alternative is the pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley, all I can say to what are you, Canadians, doing?" Wolf said.

Bellingham area representative Donald Hansey said his constituents also are opposed to tanker shipments but had to face the reality of high unemployment and the need for the estimated 400 jobs the refinery will produce.

"Economics are such as to overcome opposition, so the best thing is to try to minimize the danger of an oil spill," Hansey said.

Wolf said the legislature is catching up to the problem of framing regulations for tanker movement through coastal waters and pilotage.

SUPER SHIP ORDERS ALREADY PLACED

The latest Canadian attempt to prevent tanker shipping of oil through B.C. coastal waters is being led by Esquimalt Saanich MP David Anderson. He is seeking a court injunction to prevent construction of the Alaska pipeline.

"I am appalled at the fact that Ottawa and the provincial government don't seem to be aware of these developments and haven't been involved in planning safety measures on a joint basis," Barrett said.

Both parties also discussed briefly the possible flooding of the Skagit Valley. Neither this nor the threat of an oil spill has raised as much discussion in Washington as it has in B.C.

The NDP group was asked whether opposition to the flooding would subside if the conditions for lease payments on the flooded area were improved. If the flooding takes place B.C. will receive about $35,000 per year in compensation.

Barrett said raising lease payments to $1 million per year would not change the NDP's opposition.

"The Skagit is a psychological high water point," Barrett said. "If both communities are successful in stopping it, it will be an example of federal politicians responding to regional pressures."

Pollution dangers and ecological issues are not prominent in Washington this year because of high unemployment estimated at about 10 per cent of the labor force. Legislators also face an election here in November and must shape a redistribution of electoral districts before it comes.

As a result, their minds are more on practical economic and political matters.

The NDP MLAs spent a full afternoon on discussion.

Both groups spent much time discussing each other's political systems, and some of the Americans were clearly surprised to discover their guests were socialists.

As the NDP group emerged from an in-camera session

Stanfield, Wallace To Huddle Jan. 25

Robert Stanfield, leader of the national Progressive Conservative Party, will visit Victoria on Jan. 25 to discuss reorganization of the B.C. party with Dr. Scott Wallace and provincial leader Derril Warren.

Wallace, who as MLA for Oak Bay quit the Social Credit Party last year to become an independent, Monday announced he had joined the Tories to become the party's first member in the legislature in 17 years.

Wallace Wednesday said he and Warren will draw on Stanfield's "tremendous" organizational experience towards immediate steps to revitalize the Tories as a party to be reckoned with in B.C.

"We can't revitalize without reorganizing first," he said. "And Warren and I are a couple of neophytes as far as political organization goes."

Warren, a Vancouver lawyer, last year defeated John de Wolf as B.C. leader. Wallace at first had rejected any idea of joining the Tories because of de Wolf's leadership.

Wallace said he will discuss "anything he (Stanfield) wants to in the political realm" and work for the party "without any reservations" now that he has ironed out his previous indecision.

Wallace said Stanfield phoned him on Tuesday from Halifax to express his pleasure at having him within the party.

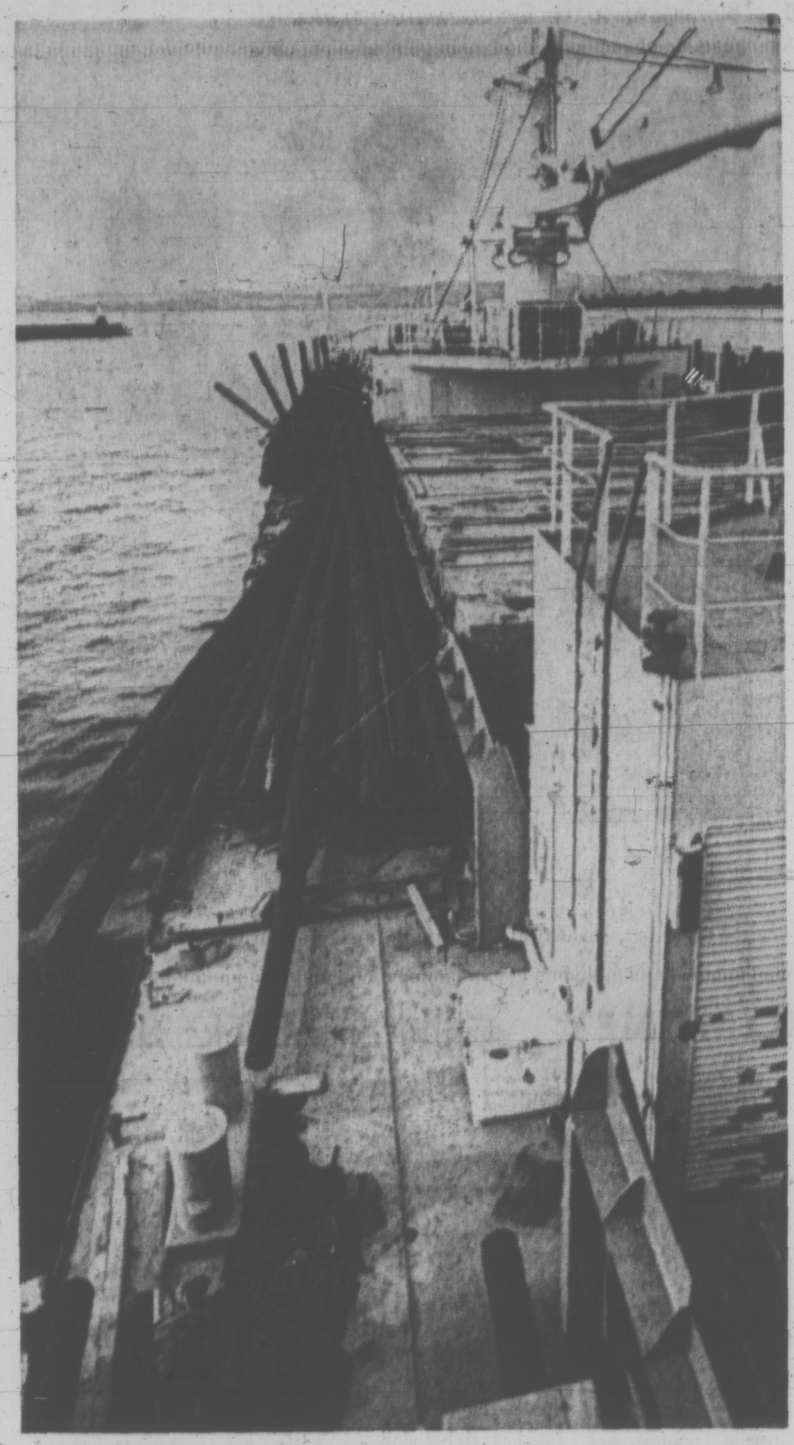
"I had talked to him about my indecision at that time," Wallace said.

Stanfield, in a three-day visit to B.C., will address the Vancouver Board of Trade Jan. 24, and, after visiting Victoria, will attend a federal Conservative nominating meeting for Burnaby - Richmond on Jan. 26.



DECK CARGO of creosoted piles aboard German freighter Cap Carmel took a battering in rough weather, forcing 5,025-ton vessel to turn about near Cape Flattery and dock at Ogden Point for repairs Wednesday. She had sailed from New Westminster for Panama area Tuesday and will be delayed three or four days for repairs.

Rigid, Two-Nation Control Asked on Coastal Shipping

Victoria MP David Groos said today he has written Prime Minister Trudeau urging establishment of an international commission to rigidly control shipping on the west coast.

Victoria is apparently about to become an outpost alongside a vast oil tanker route between Alaska and a refinery at Cherry Point in Washington, said Groos. An international agency similar to the one operating the St. Lawrence Seaway is needed immediately.

He said an international commission for the west coast should have power to control shipping from Alaska to San Francisco, including authority to seize and destroy if necessary ships which are obviously endangering the Canadian or American coast.

The British have now written into their statutes this sort of authority, he said.

Besides urging quick action on establishing a joint commission, Groos detailed in today's letter to Trudeau what powers he thinks the commission should have and what steps it should take.

These include:

● A jurisdiction including not only the Strait of Juan de Fuca and Gulf of Georgia but rules covering ships headed for these waters from Alaska to San Francisco.

● Quality standards for ships which will be entering waters under the commission's jurisdiction.

"In other words, ships will have to have certain safeguards before they will be allowed in . . ."

● An elaborate system of navigational aids, including long-range blind navigation and short-range equipment, light and sound signals and escort vessels for particularly critical cargos.

"There will have to be a beefed-up pilotage organization which to my mind would require them to have a pilot aboard for the whole time they're in waters under the commission's jurisdiction."

Americans Deceptive

Groos said a system of reporting procedures for incoming marine traffic would be needed, one which advised on what cargoes were being carried, destinations and safeguards.

● There is a need for "harbors of refuge," points along the coast to aid ships damaged or in other difficulties.

"We just cannot have ships leaking oil travelling up and down our straits."

● A much more sophisticated rescue and aid service for ships in trouble, one which could incidentally strengthen the present air-sea rescue operation for small boats in distress.

● The commission would have to establish traffic channels for ships moving along the coast with dangerous cargoes and this would mean a central routing control apparatus somewhere on the Canadian or American west coast.

Groos said he had discussed informally the idea of a international commission with individual members of the U.S. congressional maritime committee.

"They have been very receptive to the idea. I don't think we'll find any difficulty."

He suggested conservationists should be represented on the international agency.

Groos said he had deliberately refrained from making his formal application to Trudeau before now so he would not prejudice the court battle being waged against the tanker route by his fellow MP David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich) and the Canadian Wildlife Federation.

Anderson and the CWF are seeking an injunction to delay the proposed pipeline from Alaska's north slope oil fields to the port of Valdez. Their case is scheduled to go before a court in Washington, D.C., Friday.

QUORUM RULE STANDS

The Victoria Labor Council will have to operate under stringent new quorum regulations, secretary Larry Ryan said today.

The new rule, imposed by the Canadian Labor Congress on all local labor councils in the country, led to fears being expressed here last month that not many meetings will be held because the quorum won't be met.

The old quorum in Victoria was 20 delegates from six unions. The new quorum is 50 delegates from 18 unions. Attendance generally has been between 25 and 40 delegates from 20 to 25 unions.

"We are definitely stuck with the new quorum regulation, no ifs and buts," said Ryan.

"This new regulation may be a spur to a better response from unions and might urge them to come out. But the law has been laid down and they are not going to have any constitutional variations."

The labor council has credentials for 63 regular delegates and 48 alternates, sufficient to meet the new regulation if there is a good turnout.

Crime Rate Cause? Choose a Theory

Different theories were put forward today to explain the high crime rate in British Columbia.

Some of the explanations: tourism, drugs, young people, better reporting of offences, transients and the permissive society.

Figures released Wednesday by Statistics Canada showed B.C. had the highest rates in the country for murder, manslaughter, rape, breaking and entering, theft over $50 and petty theft in 1970.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said B.C. shows the highest crime rate because it is the best at reporting offences.

The RCMP is responsible for most of the province's policing and this means that a high standard of reporting offences is maintained, he said.

"This reflects to the credit of police. But it points up we do have a problem."

He called for "top-priority" for law enforcement from government and the public, urging support for the police including addition to their numbers.

★ ★ ★ ★

Peterson said the statistics on crime rates are misleading because of differences in reporting of offences.

"Where would you sooner walk at night — in Edmonton which has the highest crime rate or in Montreal and Quebec City which are supposed to have the lowest," he asked.

He also said statistics for the first nine months of 1971 show a levelling off from the peaks of 1970 in many categories of offences.

Deputy Victoria police chief Ray Maitland said the province's climate attracts transients and where these are young people dabbling in drugs "they're going to do things to support their habit."

A lot of crime cases involve out-of-town people, he said. Another factor was permissiveness in dealing with juveniles involved in crime.

Assistant RCMP commissioner G. C. Cunningham said the high rate of tourism might be a contributing factor.

Tisdalle 'Expects' Answers

John Tisdalle, MLA for Saanich and the Islands, said today he will attend a University of Victoria board of governors meeting Monday to find out why it gave president Bruce Partridge an $80,000 terminal settlement.

Tisdalle made arrangements to attend the meeting after he was asked this week by the Saanich school board to investigate the reasons behind such a large settlement.

"I expect to get some answers," Tisdalle said.

Asked whether he had any views on the matter, the Social Credit MLA replied: "It would be rather unfair for me to make observations on something that has yet to be considered."

Formal Order, Please, Or the Slash Goes On

The president of a tree-clearing firm said work will continue today on the 150-acre Lineham property on Land's End Road until a stop-work order in writing is issued by the municipality of North Saanich.

Ron Smith, president of Charles A. Cowie Tree Service Ltd., said he was given a verbal stop-work order Tuesday afternoon by a municipal official and told a written order would be forthcoming.

'JOB TO DO'

"But there has been nothing further . . . and I have a job to do," Smith said.

North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis said that although no written stop-work order had been issued, logging activities were suspended "by mutual consent."

Smith said today he would honor only a written order. His firm was blocked from slashing and burning timber on an adjacent property owned by the Bains Development Company Ltd., on Jan. 4 via a posted stop-work order from the municipality.

Harold Lineham, 1150 Richardson, owner of the property, said he regards such orders as discriminatory.

"It is not their (the municipality's) business to stop tree-clearing," he said.

Lineham eventually plans to subdivide the land.

$5,000 DAMAGE IN SAILBOAT FIRE

Sidney firemen extinguished a blaze which caused about $5,000 damage to a 45-foot sailboat in Tsehum harbor early Wednesday morning.

RCMP say they have not yet been able to contact MacComo, owner of the vessel, who is at sea in another boat.

Chief Hugh Loney said eight men put the fire out in about an hour with the aid of a portable pump.

Cause of the blaze has not been established.

The 'Nowhere Man' Is Someplace Now

"Are you content to let other people run your life?" Judge William Ostler asked Donald F. Magee, 21, of no fixed address.

He said he was.

He pleaded guilty to ordering a $4.90 meal at the Strathcona Hotel Wednesday and not paying for it.

He wrote on the back of the bill "Sorry, no money." He told police he wanted to be arrested.

The accused told Ostler he had left his home in Montreal in November by bus and arrived in Vancouver several days later. He arrived in Victoria Tuesday.

He said he ordered the food because he was hungry and had no place to stay.

"You don't want to stay in jail?" Ostler said, but Magee said he did.

The judge asked if he was travelling around the country.

"Nowhere, really," Magee said of his destination.

Ostler said he had never met such a negative man.

The judge sentenced the accused to a nominal one day in jail, adding it was "too absurd" to send the man to prison for such an offence.

For Wallace, a Skirl if Not a Fanfare

LET US CAST A NOSTALgic over-the-shoulder glance at an era when each election brought its quota of Conservatives to British Columbia's legislative flock. They spoke in debate, chaffered in caucus with others of their kind, and voted on the bills. In those pre-coalition years, there was nothing to indicate that the House would one day number the sober-feathered Tory among its extinct species.

Perhaps the end began even before 1952 — the year when coalition blew up with an echoing bang; and party chief Herbert Anscomb lost his Oak Bay seat to a Liberal. In any case, history records that B.C.'s last lone Tory MLA ended it all by declaring himself an Independent during the 1955 session.

Now, 17 years later, the wheel has gone full circle. Before this month is over, the topless plaster ladies of the Legislative Chamber will gaze down on another Conservative.

True, Dr. Scott Wallace will rate a 'P.C.' rather than the oldtime Tory 'C' after his name, and he will not sit as a Progressive Conservative by process of election. However, if the return of a long-absent party to the House doesn't qualify for a flourish of trumpets, at least it calls for a skirl of bagpipes.

I wish tough and trenchant Dr. Wallace well in his new role. He can be expected to stand firm against the assaults of a government party that seems doomed by fate to have traditionally old-line Oak Bay elude its grasp.

We might also consider this ironic circumstance.

It was a Conservative who in 1951 crossed the floor of the House to prepare the way for Social Credit. Now, in a switch only less dramatic, a disenchanted Social Credit member proposes to sit as a Progressive Conservative.

One swallow doesn't make a summer — but this parallel in reverse deserves to be pondered by anyone who takes stock in omens!

Not all of the news is new, and one story that broke last weekend has been repeated in outline since man first ventured to do business in great waters.

Add to the roster of lost ships the Dona Anita, bound with a cargo of Canadian potash for Japan, and overwhelmed in a gale off our coast.

That too is an old, sad story many times repeated in all oceans. And although in this swift-paced century we have become hardened to the new and the strange, the sinking with all hands of a ship at sea can still move us.

Man who has launched on the conquest of space has yet to subdue the element that washes his earthly shores. The loss of the Dona Anita provides a tragic reminder of that fact.

When the great winds blow, there's still point to the time-worn longshore supplication: "God help all sailors on a night like this."

As one who pre-made and pre-broke his New Year's resolution to avoid putting off chores, I am dealt with in the kindest of terms by Mrs. T. Hutchinson of 1010 Hampshire Road.

"When I was a little girl," Mrs. Hutchinson writes, "I was always going to do something 'tomorrow', so one day my mother bought a plaque with the following poem:

"'I'll do it tomorrow', 'tis easy to say,
But it spells certain failure, so do it today
For moments fly fast, and today soon will be
Enwrapt in the folds of eternity.

"'I'll do it tomorrow', nay brother, pray pause.
Take heed of the danger that lurks in that clause,
For barques have gone down in the whirlpool of sorrow
That were wrecked on the reef of 'I'll do it tomorrow'."

A worthy precept, and one that I hope will be taken to heart by any reader who is inclined to procrastinate.

Not by me, though! As Mrs. Hutchinson observes to this putter-off with uncomfortable insight, "I'm sure it's too late for these words to do you any good."

So much for this day, and off now with the firm intention of letting tomorrow take care of itself!

Girls for Brentwood!

Brentwood College School will accept girl students into Grades 11 and 12 next September, headmaster David Mackenzie confirmed today.

Brentwood has been a boys school since its formation in 1923.

The change, which will be detailed at a news conference Monday, is the result of an extensive survey of similar schools, Mackenzie said.

He said one of the main reasons for beginning a co-educational program is a belief that academic competition will be improved. Enrolment will remain at 250 students and a "limited number" of girl students will be accepted.

No Wonder Palermo Is Deep in the Hole

PALERMO, Sicily — Mayor Giacomo Marchello drove himself to work today. His car and 39 other city-owned passenger cars stayed locked up in the city garage because the road use taxes have not been paid. The city's buses continued to run, but only because police agreed to look the other way. The bus taxes have not been paid either, although the compulsory insurance has been paid. Palermo is 75 million lire ($127.5 million) in debt. The city council plans to approve money for the vehicle taxes, but even then it will take several days before the governmental red tape is unwound and the 40 cars may be used once more. Every alderman and city department head in Palermo is furnished with a city car and chauffeur.

MONTREAL — Any Canadians suffering from deflated egos can pump themselveh up a bit by glancing through the memorabilia of the late Georges Philias Vanier. The high regard in which Canada's second home-grown governor-general was held by eminent European and other figures is underlined by the forthcoming auction of some Vanier books and possessions. Inscriptions in books and various warm expressions of admiration indicate that Canada's reputation was enhanced by the six-foot lawyer-soldier-diplomat who even physically exuded a touch of Gallic grandeur, thanks partly to snowy-white hair and a twirly mustache. These tributes invariably include Mme. Vanier, who shared his trials as well as successes and has remained active since the governor-general died in 1967 after 7½ years Rideau Hall. Proceeds from the sale will go to the charities of Mme. Vanier.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Used car dealer Michael Lisman took the $1,000 bill, handed back $447.50 in change and watched the customer drive off in a convertible. Then Lisman noticed the bill had been issued by the United States of Anemia and signed by treasurer A. Phoneybill. The salesman took off in pursuit of the funny money man who, as it turned out, had purchased a bogus buggy. The car had broken down nearby. The customer, found in a tavern, returned the keys and $100 to Lisman, explaining the balance had been used to purchase a color television. Police said they turned the matter over to treasury agents.

FAIRFORD, England — Prince Philip took the controls of the Concorde supersonic air transport Wednesday, got it up to twice the speed of sound and said: "It was easy." Philip, who regularly pilots aircraft and helicopters of the Queen's special air squadron, took the controls for much of a 92-minute test flight. He touched Mach 2.02 about 1,350 miles an hour, before handing them back to test pilot Brian Trubshaw who landed the plane.

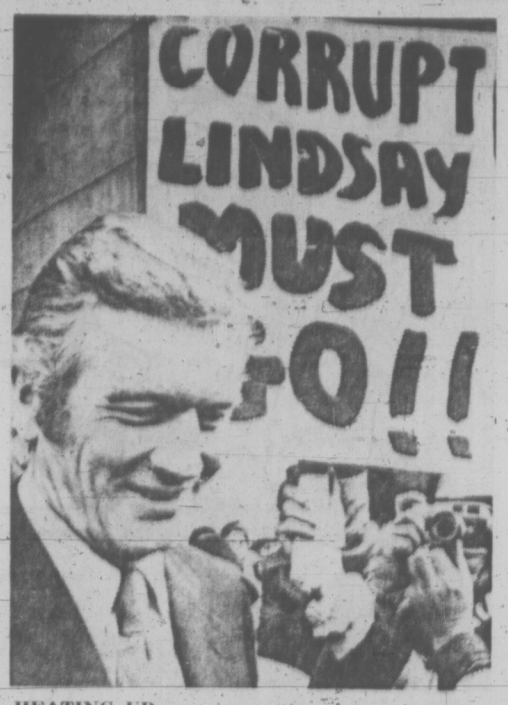
WASHINGTON — U.S. Surgeon-General Jesse L. Steinfeld told a group of women Wednesday that smoking could wrinkle their skin and ruin their smile. "Now, I can't really believe that women seriously want to endanger their health and grow old before their time," said the non-smoking Steinfeld. He announced "a major women's campaign" by the U.S. public health service "to do what we can to counteract the mindless barrage of ads luring women into the trap of cigarette smoking."

NAIROBI, Kenya — Jacob Mboya Arawo, oldest known citizen of Kenya's South Nyanza district near Lake Victoria, has died at the age of 147. Arawo left three wives, 134 grandsons and 103 granddaughters. He was given a mixed traditional Kenyan and Christian burial.



HEATING UP as primary time nears is the U.S. presidential election race. John Lindsay ignores a hostile picket as he heads for meeting in Boston where he announced he would run in the Massachusetts primary April 25.

Fishermen Agree

Sooke fishermen are not opposed to relocating Victoria's fishing fleet, plus any overflow from Vancouver's fleet, in Sooke harbor. But first they must have wharfage for themselves, Wally Vowles, a spokesman for the fishermen, said today.

He was commenting on a transport department proposal to relocate commercial fishermen in Sooke.

Vowles said the Sooke government wharf accommodates only 13 commercial vessels.

He said berths for rent on adjacent wharves owned by Sooke fish buyer Larry Sutherland are also available, but a third of the private wharfage has been blown away and the remainder is in an advance state of deterioration.

The Sooke-Jordan River Chamber of Commerce, he said, is preparing a brief for presentation to the federal transport department requesting "additional wharfage to look after the needs of local fishermen.

U.K. Commissioner Plans Hectic Visit

British High Commissioner Sir Peter Hayman will attend the opening of the B.C. legislature, Premier Bennett's reception and state ball, and address two clubs during his stay in Victoria next week.

He will be in Victoria Monday, prior to the legislature opening, when he will be guest speaker at a Men's Canadian Club luncheon at the Empress Hotel at noon. He also will speak at the Women's Canadian Club at Newcombe Auditorium at 2:30 p.m.

He and Lady Hayman will be guests of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John Nicholson while in Victoria.

Educated at Oxford, the 57-year-old commissioner served in the Home Office and British Army prior to and during the Second World War, moving to the ministry of defence in 1949.

He was also information adviser to the governor of Malta, director-general of the information services in New York. He served as deputy undersecretary of state before taking his present appointment in 1970.

Joey's Decision Ends Muddle

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood is expected to tell Newfoundlanders late today if his Liberal government will resign in the face of a Progressive Conservative majority that was almost destroyed by a misunderstanding Wednesday night.

Mr. Smallwood planned to issue a public statement after a midday cabinet meeting and an afternoon gathering of the party caucus.

PC Leader Frank Moores and Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader, were reunited as political allies early today after Mr. Moores accused Mr. Burgess of selling out to the Liberals.

Mr. Moores said Wednesday night he had learned that Mr. Burgess would abandon his promised support of the Conservatives to run for the leadership of the Liberal party.

PROMISED SUPPORT

Thirteen days after the election Mr. Burgess said he would support the PCs while remaining a member of the New Labrador Party.

Mr. Moores made the accusation without making contact with Mr. Burgess, who was spending the night in Happy Valley, a southern Labrador community, while en route to St. John's where he is expected later today.

Gerry Korbai, a reporter with radio station VOCM here, reached Mr. Burgess by telephone and learned the NLP leader was trying to reach Mr. Moores to deny the allegations.

Mr. Korbai then telephoned Mr. Moores at his home in St. John's and arranged for him to receive Mr. Burgess' call.

After a lengthy conversation, both leaders announced there was no change in Mr. Burgess' position.

Mr. Moores' charge came after widespread speculation that Mr. Burgess would switch his support to the Liberals.

WILL DISCUSS REQUESTS

"My position has not changed one whit," Mr. Burgess said.

Mr. Moores said he would discuss with his caucus today requests by Mr. Burgess that a PC government pay special attention to Labrador, especially in the provision of roads and medical services.

Mr. Smallwood's decision to make a public statement arises from a Newfoundland Supreme Court ruling Tuesday that confirmed a PC candidate as the victor in St. Barbe South.

Geoffroy Loses Case In Absentia

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal has rejected the appeal of Yves Geoffroy against his 1969 murder conviction on the grounds that Geoffroy missing from prison here since late last month— failed to appear in court.

Geoffroy, 38, a former notary in Joliette, Que., was convicted of strangling his first wife and sentenced to life in prison.

After serving 14 months, he was given a three-day pass to marry outside the walls of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary Dec. 24.

Geoffroy married on Christmas Eve, then disappeared.

Chief Justice Lucien Tremblay said in an interview Thursday the appeal was rejected "simply on grounds that he failed to show up" for the scheduled appeal hearing Monday.

"When an appellant fails to show up at his hearing, we usually postpone his case if there's a good reason for his absence.

"But in this case, the appellant was not present because he escaped from lawful custody and we don't look too kindly on such a reason for absence from court."

The decision to reject the appeal was made unanimously by five justices, he said.

Loggers Need Road in Park —Williston

VANCOUVER (CP) — Resources Minister Ray Williston said Wednesday he plans to continue to press the federal government to allow a logging road to be cut through a national park on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Speaking at the annual convention of the Truck Loggers' Association, Mr. Williston said that if the federal government does not allow the logging road, valuable timber lands on the Island will be cut off from access to the sea.

The resources minister said he wants the road so that logs can be moved to the sea for movement by log barge.

Mr. Williston's department already has issued two licences to harvest timber on the land affected. He said the province has other areas of timber land which cannot be harvested because logging trucks are denied the use of the only access roads, which happen to run through national parkland.

'Far From Beaten' On Mobile Home Fee

But Ed Saunders, president of the Active Mobile Home Owners' Association, said Tuesday "we also feel we are far from beaten. We're going to continue to organize and grow, until we have sufficient numbers to give any political group cause for worry."

Saunders made the comment Wednesday evening following a meeting in Langford of the organization. No actions were taken at the meeting, however, because it was five people short of the required quorum of 50.

The provincial government established on May 1 a $3 to $8 monthly fee for residents of parks under the Mobile Home Park Fee Act. Fines range from $25 to $200 for park operators who fail to collect the fees.

Because operators have been balking at collecting, the cabinet last week made two amendments to the regulations. Operators will now get to keep 10 per cent of the total monthly remittance if they remit fees by the 15th of each month, and if they file no returns they will be taxed as though every space in their park was occupied by a Grade A mobile home.

Joey Quits At Last

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Newfoundland Liberal government will resign next Monday or Tuesday, Premier Joseph Smallwood announced this afternoon. (See earlier story on Page 3.)

The premier's announcement ended more than two months of uncertainty and came after meetings with his cabinet and with the Liberal party caucus. His announcement followed a ruling by the Newfoundland Supreme Court Tuesday. The court turned down a Liberal party request to declare null and void an election in the ridings of St. Barbe South.

The St. Barbe seat was won by a Conservative in the Oct. 28 provincial election by eight votes. A judicial recount requested by the Liberals was halted after some ballots were found to be missing.

Cost Rise Sharpest In Decade

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A sharp increase in food prices, especially for imported fresh vegetables, pushed the consumer price index up last month for the biggest November-to-December gain in a decade, Statistics Canada reported today.

The over-all index for December was 136.3, compared with 135.4 in November and 129.8 in December, 1970. The food index accounts for 27 per cent of the over-all index, and it rose to 135.5 from 133.0 in November and 125.6 in December, 1970.

In percentage terms, the over-all index in December was five per cent higher than it was in December, 1970. A year's gain of two per cent is generally regarded as reasonable price stability, and anything more than that is excessive.

Food prices alone were up 7.9 per cent for the year. A large part of this reflects recovery from the unusually low prices which prevailed in the fall of 1970 as the result of a supermarket price war.

FOOD HIGHER

The largest increases were in foods, mainly in fresh vegetables and beef, and in health and personal care items. In the latter category, the big increase in the index was in the price of men's haircuts.

A government spokesman said that despite the rise in prices towards the year-end, the price index performance over the whole of 1971 was moderate. The average of 1971 prices rose 2.9 per cent above the average of 1970 prices, the lowest such increase since 1965.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the announcement showed inflation "is far from dead" and rising prices are "an injustice the Canadian people won't tolerate — even if the Trudeau government will."

FIXED INCOMES

Stanfield said Parliament could remove some of the injustice done to people on fixed incomes by removing the two-per-cent limit by which federal pensions can go up each year to compensate for rising prices. He said Parliament should not have been allowed to recess to Feb. 16.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said the increase is "not something to worry about" and the threat of inflation is "not serious at this time."

U.K. TROOPS, IRA IN STREET BATTLE

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British troops and Irish Republican Army gunmen exchanged machine-gun and rifle fire for two hours in the streets of Londonderry Wednesday, the bullets whizzing near half a dozen terrified children. It was one of the most sustained battles in more than two years of violence in Northern Ireland.

The IRA accused the British of firing on women and children.

British Army spokesmen said the soldiers hit three gunmen during the battle and another gunman in a skirmish at a nearby army post. They denied IRA claims that two soldiers were shot.

In Belfast, three gunmen drove up to a textile printing plant in the city's Roman Catholic Lower Falls area Wednesday night and two of them shot to death reserve policeman Raymond Denham, 43, an electrician at the plant, the army said.

Police said the killing appeared to be an IRA political assassination.

Denham's was the 210th death in Northern Ireland since violence between the Roman Catholic minority and the Protestant majority erupted in the province in August, 1969.

The Londonderry battle erupted when five men fired at an army helicopter sweeping low over the city's Catholic Bogside district in a search for IRA gunmen.

A BBC cameraman said men and women fell flat on the pavement as bullets whizzed overhead. He saw "six or seven children, mere infants, walking straight into the line of fire.

"The shooting was coming from three or four directions, he said. He and a colleague "ran up the road and threw them (the children) into a hedge."

"A woman came out and took them off us," he said. "One little boy was so terrified that his mouth was open but no noise would come out. Another was screaming."

An IRA statement said its men "only entered the scene after soldiers had fired at women and children. We recorded two hits (on British troops)."

Mrs. Mavis Sheerin, who said she had been accompanying five children home from school, told newsmen the soldier "sprayed the field with bullets. There were a considerable number of people scattered about the field, mostly on the way home from school. There was a lot of panic and two girls fainted."

Plane Dead Found

PUCALLPA, Peru (Reuter) — All 91 bodies of the victims of a Christmas Eve jungle plane crash near this central Peruvian town have been recovered, the Peruvian air force said today. The 56 bodies included that of German-born ornithologist Marie Anna Koepcke, whose 17-year-old daughter Juliane was the crash's sole survivor.

600 Desert Airport Towers

OTTAWA (CP) — Union officials called in vain today for an immediate return to work by close to 600 control tower technicians who are staging 24-hour study sessions at most major airports across the country.

A spokesman for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers said the study sessions amounted to illegal strikes.

Union officials tried late Wednesday to head off the first of the study sessions by 40 technicians at Montreal International and nearby St. Hubert airports which began at 1 a.m. EST today.

Picket lines were later reported to have been set up at Toronto International Airport. In Ottawa, the technicians reported to the airport but were not readily available for work.

The technicians service radar, navigational and communications equipment and the walkouts have had little if any effect on airport operations. Problems with equipment, however, could result in delays at peak hours.

In Vancouver, a spokesman for the union said it was discouraging any illegal work stoppages and that members would not walk out.

In Victoria, airport manager John Knowland said this morning there was no walkout by three technicians. Flights were operating normally.

No-Fault Ruling Delayed

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

The B.C. Automobile Insurance Board reserved decision Wednesday on whether to order B.C. insurance companies to reduce no-fault insurance premiums.

Board chairman J. F. K. English gave no date for a decision following a hearing in an overflowing jury room at the Law Courts building in Victoria.

Eight of nine briefs presented to the hearing by insurance interests opposed the board's request for a reduction in the rate charged for no-fault accident benefits coverage from the current $20 to $22 level to a maximum of $14.

Only Bryan Rudkin of Westco Insurance Company backed the board, saying his firm had never charged more than $13 for the coverage.

ONE AGENCY

Rudkin also called for more B.C. control of the "Green Book" statistics on which insurance premiums are based. He also suggested greater efficiency could be obtained if the no-fault scheme were administered by a single agency, either private or government.

Such an agency would give the "lie-detect" to claims by insurance companies that a $14 rate would be inadequate for the coverage, Rudkin said.

'HOOTED'

Rudkin was hooted by many of the insurance executives in the room when he said he simply doesn't believe that many insurance companies actually gave $9 reductions in third-party liability rates when the $22 rate was established for no-fault coverage.

Ghana Army Officers Stage Bloodless Coup

The coup members, led by Lt.-Col. I. K. Achampong, told Ghanaians in a countrywide broadcast that the constitution has been suspended, political parties banned and Parliament dissolved.

The airport was closed, but reopened a few hours later, while normal communication with the outside world was cut. The cable office and the Ghana News Agency were under armed guard.

The coup came while Prime Minister Kofi A. Busia was in Britain for a medical checkup. He was a host to Mrs. Richard M. Nixon last week during her tour of West Africa.

In London, Busia was said by a spokesman to be taking the news calmly. But the spokesman did not say what Busia's next move would be.

DISCONTENT WIDESPREAD

The overthrow of Busia's government followed widespread discontent over a 44-per-cent devaluation of the currency Dec. 27, skyrocketing inflation, mass unemployment and what the radio called "mismanagement" of government.

The radio, between broadcasts of martial music, said Ghana will be temporarily led by a "national redemption council" made up of army officers, traditional chiefs, representatives of the Trade Union Congress and members of Ghana's Christian and Moslem Council and the Ghana Assembly of Women.

The Trade Union Congress had been dissolved under Busia.

The army said the government will include civilian advisers.

There was no word that army garrisons in other parts of Ghana had joined the coup leaders in Accra and there was no mention of arrests but members of Parliament were urged to check in with army authorities "for their own safety."

The new government said it will review the devaluation and study a five-per-cent rural development levy on salaries and other controversial measures by the Busia government.

ENVY JAMES MARSH!

Nobody likes to be rejected.

Particularly by those wheel-rattling officials out at the motor vehicle testing station.

So, while you can't really condone the action, is there a driver who doesn't secretly envy James O. Marsh, 33, of 3960 Saanich Road?

Marsh took his car into the Saanich station last Dec. 10, fully confident he'd get it through. The car had failed once before and Marsh had his repair receipts at the ready.

But attendant Donald Chaplin flunked it again.

Noisy muffler.

That was too much for Marsh.

He punched poor Donald right in the nose.

And he had to be restrained from doing it again.

Today, the wheels of justice rolled over Marsh. He was fined $50 by Judge William Ostler after pleading guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

ARCTIC COLD GRIPS WEST

Furnaces worked overtime Wednesday as an Arctic cold front gripped Alberta, Saskatchewan and northern British Columbia.

The cold dropped in Tuesday night and temperatures plunged to record lows for Jan. 12 at Fort Chipewyan and Coronation in Alberta and Fort Nelson in northwestern B.C.

Fort Chipewyan reported 42 below, six degrees lower than the 36 recorded in 1966. Coronation shivered in 28 below, one degree colder than the previous record in 1966, and Fort Nelson equalled a 1953 low of 45 below.

The weather office said no relief is in sight for at least three days. The forecast for today was highs of 25 below in northern and central areas, and 15 below in the south.

Jail Guards Shun Bilingual Flash

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 250 prison guards at the British Columbia Penitentiary said Wednesday they would support any guard who refuses to wear new bilingual shoulder flashes.

James Clink, president of the New Westminster local of the public service alliance, said the guards had "a full discussion" before voting to support any member who is subject to disciplinary action for refusing to wear the patches.

The solicitor-general's department has ordered all federal prison guards to wear the bilingual flashes by Friday.

The report said English-speaking guards at federal prisons across Canada viewed the bilingual flashes as a step in a plan by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer to make the penitentiary service primarily French-Canadian.

The report said the solicitor-general originally ordered the flashes to be worn by Dec. 15. When the order was largely disregarded, the government issued a deadline of Jan. 15, stating that the guards, as government employees, must follow government policy in the matter.

Clink declined to give a figure on how many men at the B.C. Penitentiary were refusing to wear the new patches, but added he was "certain some of the men will not wear them."

Oil Tanker Shipments Via Strait Inevitable, NDP Caucus Told

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

OLYMPIA — Despite continuing Canadian attempts to delay or prevent construction of an oil pipeline to Valdez, Alaska, Washington state legislators said Wednesday they consider oil tanker shipments through Juan de Fuca Strait to be inevitable.

This view was expressed by Harold Wolf, House majority whip, at a joint press conference in Olympia attended by British Columbia's New Democratic Party caucus.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said he was shocked to learn the Atlantic-Richfield company has ordered three supertankers, each capable of carrying one million barrels of oil for delivery to its refinery at Cherry Point, just south of the U.S.-Canadian border.

Barrett had told reporters the Canadian government would prefer an oil pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley. He said the NDP would never change its oppositon to tanker shipments from Valdez to Cherry Point.

Wolf told Barrett he wondered how serious Canada was about promoting the Mackenzie route when it was clear to Washington residents the Cherry Point refinery will require delivery of oil by water.

"When you say the alternative is the pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley, all I can say is what are you, Canadians, doing?" Wolf said.

Bellingham area representative Donald Hansey said his constituents also are opposed to tanker shipments but had to face the reality of high unemployment and the need for the estimated 400 jobs the refinery will produce.

"Economics are such as to overcome opposition, so the best thing is to try to minimize the danger of an oil spill," Hansey said.

Wolf said the legislature is catching up to the problem of framing regulations for tanker movement through coastal waters and pilotage.

SUPER SHIP ORDERS ALREADY PLACED

The latest Canadian attempt to prevent tanker shipping of oil through B.C. coastal waters is being led by Esquimalt Saanich MP David Anderson. He is seeking a court injunction to prevent construction of the Alaska pipeline.

"I am appalled at the fact that Ottawa and the provincial government don't seem to be aware of these developments and haven't been involved in planning safety measures on a joint basis," Barrett said.

Both parties also discussed briefly the possible flooding of the Skagit Valley. Neither this nor the threat of an oil spill has raised as much discussion in Washington as it has in B.C.

The NDP group was asked whether opposition to the flooding would subside if the conditions for lease payments on the flooded area were improved. If the flooding takes place B.C. will receive about $35,000 per year in compensation.

Barrett said raising lease payments to $1 million per year would not change the NDP's opposition.

"The Skagit is a psychological high water point," Barrett said. "If both communities are successful in stopping it, it will be an example of federal politicians responding to regional pressures."

Pollution dangers and ecological issues are not prominent in Washington this year because of high unemployment estimated at about 10 per cent of the labor force. Legislators also face an election here in November and must shape a redistribution of electoral districts before it comes.

As a result, their minds are more on practical economic and political matters.

The NDP MLAs spent a full afternoon on discussion.

Both groups spent much time discussing each other's political systems, and some of the Americans were clearly surprised to discover their guests were socialists.

As the NDP group emerged from an in-camera session
